Behind scenes at York Fair

There's always good stories to be found at a dairy show

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

YORK — There are many stories often hidden behind the grand champion banners awarded at a dairy show.

Take Wednesday's and Thursday's dairy show at the York Fair. For example:

--Taking the final grand championship walk was an up-and-coming senior two-year-old that almost didn't make it to the show

–The grand champion Jersey five-year-old can thank some timely surgery for the banner.

–And if a young 4-H'er had listened to his mother when he picked his first project calf, he wouldn't have been able to lead her out of the ring as the Brown Swiss grand champion.

But let's go a little deeper into these stories and the other breed champions at the York Fair Dairy Show this week.

"We were kinda short of help and cut down on the number of animals to bring," explains Kathy King, of Kingway Farm, R2 Delta, owner of the Holstein grand champion

"Almost at the last minute, we decided to bring her (Kingway Marvex Lulu)."

The senior two-year-old proceeded to impress judge Creedin Cornman, of Carlisle, and take the grand championship of the Holstein Show.

"But Lucy didn't feel well and we almost decided not to bring her daughter.

"I'm really glad we brought Lulu. She's been getting better all the time."

The York Fair Grand Champion was the first big win for Lulu, but her dam, Lucy, took reserve champion at the county show and has been a mainstay on the area show circuit for a number of years

The Jersey champion, owned by Marilyn Deaven, would normally have been dry at this time. But the five-year-old had a twisted stomach corrected and freshened in time for the York Show and thus was in her top full bloom. It must have helped.

"Faithful Advancer Coleen" is a former junior champion at Farm Show and will be making her first appearance in Harrisburg now that her lactation schedule has been altered. She also captured the championship of the recent District FFA Show at Shippensburg.

Mike Welsh, of Welsh Ponderosa Farms, RD East Berlin, has been showing "McCoy Delegate

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

HARRISBURG — "These families have spent generations building up their farm equity and have lost all of it in the last three or four years."

That's how Jay Greider, of Mount Joy Hatchery, describes the plight of independent egg producers he knows.

And, that's exactly what the Pennsylvania State Grange is trying to prevent in an 11th hour effort to save independent egg producers who say they are on the verge of bankruptcy.

Greider was just one of several egg agriculturists who spoke at a meeting called by the Grange in the PDA Office Building to explain the serious plight of the independent egg producers. Attending were a number of state legislators, representative of Sen. Arlen Specter, other poultry industry representatives and State Ag Sec. Penrose Hallowell.

Featured speakers were several independent Adams County egg producers who outlined their serious economic problems caused by PIK, drought, high interest rates, foreign investment and soaring utility bills.

Here's a few comments by some of these Adams County producers:

Dorothy Sterner – "The family egg producer is facing extinction after four consecutive years of losses."

Dale King – "We're losing 12 cents a dozen."

Art Musselman – "We're in a desperate situation and can't wait any longer for something to be done."

While none of the attending legislators or PDA officials had any specific immediate help that could be given the egg producers, Charles Wismer, State Grange

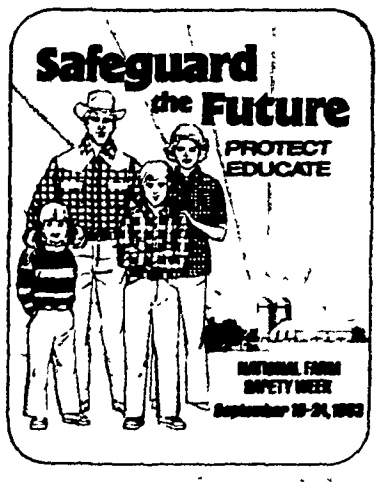
Farm Safety Week opens

BY LAURA ENGLAND

LANCASTER — On November 1, 1980, Clarence Leatherman set out with his combine to shell corn for the Fall harvest. Little did he know that his harvesting would be cut short and his life placed in jeopardy.

While harvesting on a small, sloping hill, the front wheel on his combine broke and the machine began to roll. Leatherman, a farmer from Myersville, Md., was thrown from his seat after the first roll and watched as the combine rolled twice more before coming to a rest.



Leatherman sustained three breaks in his jaw and broken facial bones as well as cuts and bruises. He was off work for several months and says that "only by God's grace is he here today."

With fall harvesting in full swing and National Farm Safety Week set for Sept. 18-24, Leatherman is advising that farmers be cautious and check their machinery routinely. In the same mode as Leatherman, the National Safey Council is urging farmers to promote the importance of safety to their children and youth.

All too often, serious accidents are reported among the farm community. Last year, farm work accidents resulted in approximately 1,800 deaths and 180,000 disabling injuries, according to a report from the National Safey Council. Children and young persons 24 and under accounted for about one of every four of this total, the report said.

With the safety of young farm family members a priority, the National Safety Council chose the theme "Safeguard the Future" for this year's National Farm Safety Week observance. With the theme, the Council has set out to make

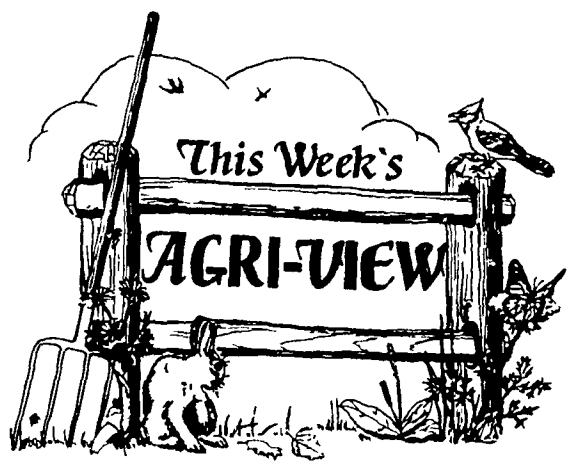
Plan To Be Present



Safeguard the Future

BY TRISH WILLIAMS

Tomorrow marks the beginning of the 40th Annual National Farm Safety Week. This year the National Safety Council, who sponsors the annual observance, has focused the week's theme on children, with the slogan, 'Safeguard the Future.'

No group of our farm population has greater potential or more to loose by an unnecessary farm accident than do our children. And the future of American agriculture will soon be in the hands of our farm youth, let's work year round to insure these are able hands.

I'm sure it is no mistake that the National Safety Council chose to observe safety week just prior to the fall harvest season. Probably no time of year poses more threat to life and limb than the fall scurry to bring the crops in. Harvesting equipment is designed to roll, snap, and chop whatever is run through the machine, and that is exactly what it will do regardless if it's corn or an appendage.

Most accidents occur in a rushed effort to get the job done. Injuries are of a more enduring nature. Protect and educate children to prevent such tragedies.

I don't think many people would deny that a farm is a great place to raise children. I know I wouldn't trade my years growing up on a farm for anything. Unfortunately, children growing up on a farm are exposed to many more hazards than are most nonfarm children, simply because the farm work place is also their playground.

Farm kids are often exposed to the same dangers as an adult, but they lack the experience and comprehension to recognize and react to these dangers.

One of the best methods an adult has of protecting and educating children from danger is by setting an example of good safe work habits. The adoption of safe work practices at an early age can result in life long benefits.

It's not enough to say 'be careful' In fact that frequently used expression is so very vague, it is little more than a phrase of endearment.

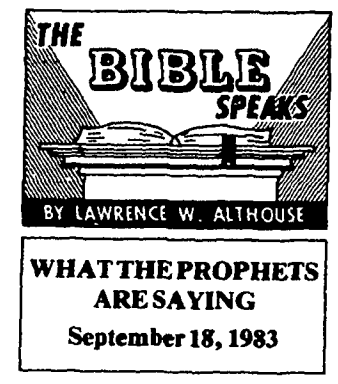
Giving specific instructions on what and how to do something go much further toward encouraging positive attitudes towards accident prevention and safety practices.

Educating children is a major step toward their self preservation, but it is not enough. Eliminate safety hazards on the farm wherever possible. Your child's friends who visit with them on the farm are less aware of the dangers. Keep guns, chemical products, medications, matches, tools and such inaccessible to small children. Make sure shop, grain bins, animal quarters, silos, and other potentially dangerous areas on the farm are off-limits to young children.

They say, the gift of life is the most precious gift given. Then teaching children how to protect that life has to be a lesson of equal value.

Make safe work practices a year round habit.

When you head out to the fields to bring in the crops, take your time. Have a safe harvest, and a long healthy, productive life.



WHAT THE PROPHETS ARE SAYING

September 18, 1983

Background Scripture:
Deuteronomy 18: 15-22; Amos 7:10-15; 5:21-24; Micah 6:8.
Devotional Reading:
Amos 7:1-9.

There has always been one main problem with prophets and prophecy: how do you determine which prophet speaks for God and which prophecy is true?

It may seem to us that the Bible is loaded with prophets and prophecies, but actually they are but a very very small proportion of those who appeared in what we regard as Biblical times. The Bible records for us the names and words of those who in retrospect are regarded as having been authentic messengers of God. With few exceptions, it has not recorded for us the names of those who were ultimately judged to have been false prophets—a multitude by comparison.

How May We Know?

Something else becomes apparent: many of the prophets were not regarded as God's messengers during their own time. More often than not, these judgements were made later—meaning: usually too late! Deuteronomy acknowledges this problem: "And if you say in your heart, 'How may we know the word which the Lord has spoken?' — when a prophet speaks in the name of the Lord, if the word does not come to pass or come true, that is a word which the Lord has not spoken." (18:21,22).

The problem is that we often do not have the luxury of waiting to see if this prophet or that prophet is confirmed by history. For example, two years ago a religious prophet of sorts proclaimed that in November of that year a great natural disaster would strike Florida and it would be utterly destroyed. Inasmuch as we had accepted a speaking engagement in Florida at that time, we were placed in the position of making some evaluation of this prophecy. Of course, we decided to keep the engagement and as I write these words Florida stands pretty much as always. Yet, some people we know heeded the prophecy and moved to another state.

He Has Showed You

Yet, we must remember that God's messengers are not just foretellers of future events. They come to tell us about what is happening in the present, too. Amos came to tell the people of his day what was displeasing to God: "I hate, I despise your feasts, and I take no delight in your solemn assemblies." Even more, however, he came to tell the people what God really wanted: "But let justice roll down like waters, and righteousness like an ever-flowing stream." And Micah's message was just as contemporary: "He has showed you, O man, what is good; and what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to live kindness, and to walk humbly with your God."

We may not always be able to discern prophetic predictions of the future until it has become the present. But when we hear voices talking to us, like Amos and Micah, about what God really wants from us—justice, righteousness, kindness—we need not wait to know what God has raised up a prophet in our midst.

To Be Aware of the Century Farm Program

The Century Farm Program is aimed at recognizing the efforts of Pennsylvania's farm families which have preserved the traditions and the rural heritage of the pioneer farm.

The program was initiated as part of the Nation's bicentennial observance in 1976, but is being continued for its value in promoting the ideals of the family farm and the importance of farming to Pennsylvania's economy.

To be eligible for certification as a Pennsylvania Century Farm, a farm must have been owned by the same family for the last 100 consecutive years, and a family member must currently reside on the land. In addition, the farm must consist of ten or more acres of the original holdings or gross at least $1,000 a year from the sale of agricultural products.

We encourage you to participate in this program that is administrated by the Pennsylvania Deparment of Agriculture.

To Secure Wood Supply

Many homeowners are planning to use more wood for heating their homes this winter. This is a national trend resulting in a strong demand for all kinds of wood. Prices are also reflecting this increased demand. Woodlot owners might be in a position to do some tree culling and thinning and realize some extra income from the area. It's not too early to be getting this wood on hand or to do some cutting. Since dry wood will give better results than green wood, it will be best to have the wood supplies cut and drying before cold weather arrives. As I have traveled the county in recent weeks, I have noticed more and more wood piles in rural areas. Wood is a renewable natural resource and deserves our attention in production as well as marketing for fuel saving purposes.

To Check Ventilation Systems in Poultry Houses

Understanding the principles of the basic fan laws are critical to understanding our ventilation system-and why we should not do some things and why some things cost us money.

There are three basic fan principles:

(1) "As we vary the speed of a fan the volume of air varies in direct proportion". It is a one to one ratio-if we double the speed of a fan, we can double the capacity of air. We could do this by changing pulleys, but DO NOT do this, as the fan systems are designed as received by you. Principle 2 and 3 will explain.

(2) "As you vary the speed (volume) of the fan, the pressure varies by the square". In other words, if you would double the speed of the fan by changing a pulley, the pressure would go up FOUR TIMES. The reverse is also true-if you restrict the inlets, raising the static pressure, you slow the fans down.

(3) "As you vary the speed (volume) of the fan, the power varies by the cube". So if you were to double the speed of the fan, it would take EIGHT TIMES the power to do it. Power in this case is electricity-so you can see fan motors burning out if you change pulleys or a shutter sticks shut creating too much back pressure.

Give these fan principles some thought, for efficient ventilation and even in some cases, the safety of the birds and the building.

To Stop Fertilizing Trees and Shrubs

During this time of the year we should not be applying any fertilizer to rose bushes, trees or shrubs. The season's growing period is about over and the new growth should have a chance to harden before cold weather arrives. When we fertilize during the fall we encourage new growth, which will be tender, and will winter-kill in very cold weather.

It is best to wait until spring to apply any plant food to these types of plants. Mulching is a good thing to preserve moisture and control weeds, but keep the fertilizer in the bag until 1984.

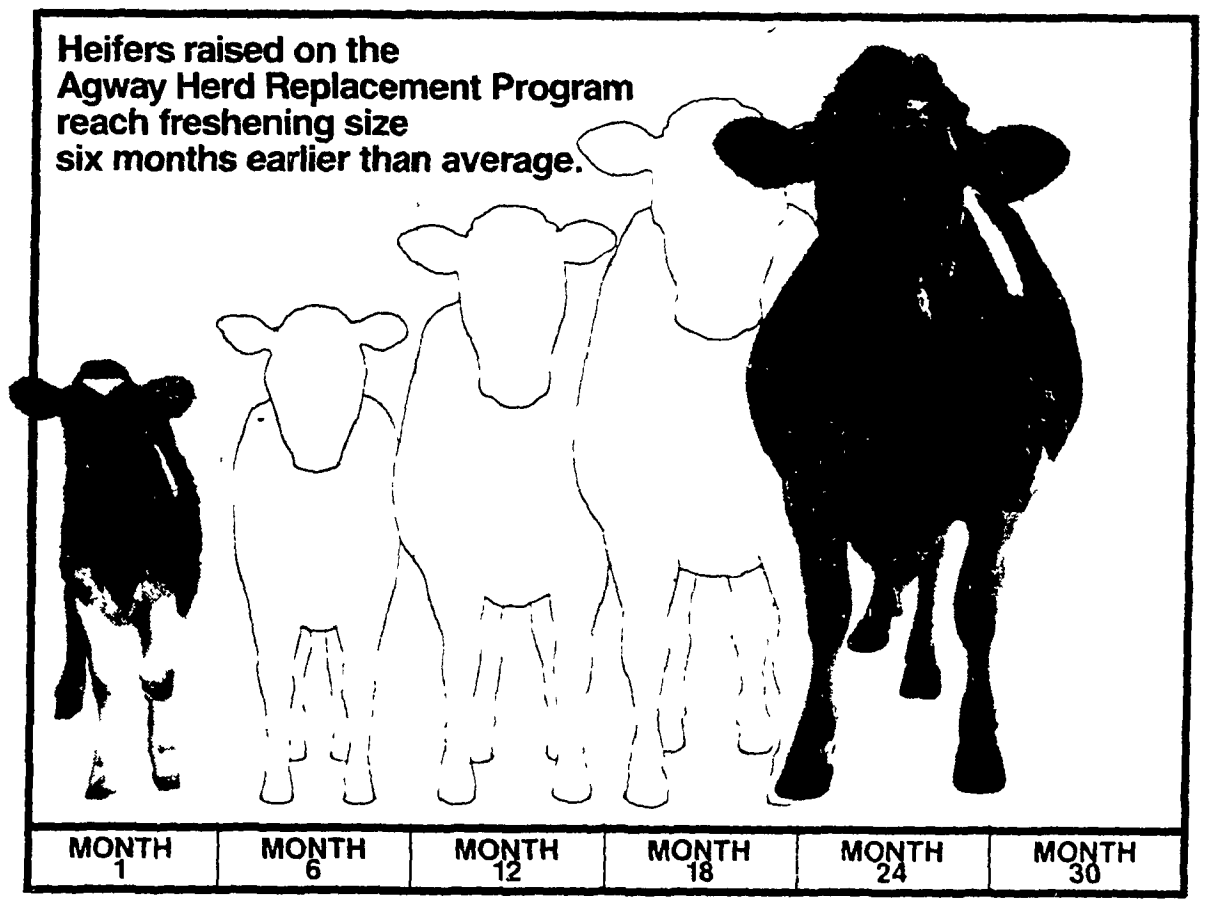
How to bring calves up to freshening size six months earlier...



and earn higher profits doing it

The faster you bring your heifers into the milking string, the faster you start earning profits And that's exactly what you can do with the Agway Herd Replacement Program Here's how

Agway Milk Replacer saves saleable milk and dollars

Start your calves off early on Agway White, Blue or Red Label Milk Replacer Dollar for dollar and pound for pound it's more economical to feed Agway Milk Replacer than to feed the saleable milk in your tank So it makes sense to sell the milk and raise your calves on Agway Milk Replacer.

Plus Agway Milk Replacers help keep calves healthy. They're fortified with all the vitamins the calf needs, plus antibiotics. And each has ample protein for faster growth.

Feed Agway Total Calf Ration (TCR) for faster growth and earlier freshening

At five days, start your calves off on a fast weight gain program with TCR I TCR I is an all-pelleted complete feed designed for self-feeding with no additional forage needed At 300 pounds offer hay free choice or switch to TCR II

In Agway research trials, calves raised on TCR gained 1 93 pounds per day, and reached breeding size in 14 months That kind of growth means forage savings, reduced labor and earlier freshening (24 months).

Start managing your herd replacements for faster growth and higher profits with the Agway Herd Replacement Program. For more information on Agway Milk Replacers and TCR, contact your Agway Store, Representative or Enterprise Salesperson.

Frey, Shive headline Jr. Angus Show at York

BY LAURA ENGLAND

Frey, Quarryville, earned grand championship honors with his junior yearling heifer, Blackbird of Ettrick 3P. Shive, Seven Valleys, took the reserve title with her summer heifer, BV Queen 582.

Fritz Frey was named junior yearling winner and Cathy Shive, the reserve. Late junior yearling class winners were Diane Krause, champion, and Joann Rishel, reserve.

Following the judging by Gary Dean, Strasburg, an open showmanship contest for all junior beef showman at the York Fair was held. "We tried Hardy Brand corn...

"As the name goes, it's Hardy!"

Dick and Gary Hahn
Easton, PA

"Considering this year's dry weather, the Hardy 701X, 703X, and 301X have done real good for us. They dry down real good, produce good, and the price is right. And the corn looks real nice. Hardy corn really is hardy! They live up to their name, and I intend to stick with them.

Another thing I like—I always plant medium flat kernels, and Hardy seems to run nice and uniform. I can go from one variety to another and I don't have to change plates."

"Hardy outyielded the competition."

Sam Piazza
Piazza Farms
Phillipsburg, NJ

"The first year I tried Hardy, I planted 701X and 301X right alongside the Pioneer. They outyielded both of the Pioneer varieties for their maturity dates.

Let's face it, anyone can put out a variety that will do good in an ideal season. You've got to be able to perform respectably in a poor season. You don't want to hear excuses—you want to go out there with a combine and have corn on those ears. In two years' experience with Beachley-Hardy, I haven't had a problem."

"We like corn that husks nice and clean."

Donald Mack
Mack Farms
Pen Argyl, PA

"We tried it, we liked it. It husked well . . better than some others we tried. And it stood up well and yielded well, about 150 bushels or so. I've been buying Hardy Corn for around 10 years. We use 701X, 802X, and this year we tried some 301XS and 602XS.

Hardy has good standability, and it's reasonably priced. You probably get more kernels to their full bushel bag than a lot of other companies, and Hardy's price is often lower."

...and we like it!"

Farm council looks to new legislative year

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations met Thursday to discuss newly proposed and pending agricultural legislation that will come before the next session of state Congress.

Addressing the breakfast meeting, George Wolff a member of the Council's Executive Committee, gave an update on the Chesapeake Bay nutrient loading pollution problem. Approximately $4.5 million has recently been appropriated by the federal government to the states of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia, to correct the problem, said Wolff. The money appropriated is ear marked for programs to reduce nutrient loading and clean up the bay, and is allocated on a cost share basis. Cost shares would be 55 percent federal money and 45 percent state funding. Wolff said that 1.8 million has been appropriated for Pennsylvania for programs to reduce nonpoint pollution. He said that Pennsylvania must now come up with the matching funds.

Al Myers, director of governmental relations for Pennsylvania Farmers Association, reported on House and Senate bills soon to come on the floor of Congress. In reference to the 'bottle bill', H.B. 1341 and S.B. 463, Myers said that there is an extremely strong lobby against the bill, and urged the 37 members in attendence at the breakfast to gain support for the bill in their various farm organizations, and to lobby hard for the bill.

Other bills discussed by Myers included: H.B. 686 which if passed would prohibit hunting in unharvested fields of corn, sorghum, soybeans, and buckwheat. H.B. 163 that would exempt grain bins and corn cribbs from property tax. H.B. 743 that would exclude firewood from sales tax (coal and oil are not taxed).

Charles Wismer, State Grange master, reported on two resolutions expected to go before the House. One of the resolutions proposes that October be declared "Cooperative Month". The second resolution, if passed by the Pa. Congress would urge the United States Congress to put a Pennsylvania legislator on either the Senate or the House Committee on Agriculture. Pennsylvania, one of the nation's strongest agricultural states has no representatives on either committee.

Wismer also reported that the Grange is asking Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture, Penrose Hallowell, to send a telegram to U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, John Block, urging him to reinstate the feed grains purchase program. The program would allow livestock and poultry producers to purchase government (CCC) stocks of grain at the county loan rate.

State dairy princess coronation scheduled

HARRISBURG — The 27th annual Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Banquet and Coronation will be held Tuesday at the Harrisburg Marriott Inn. The evening begins with a reception at 5:30 p.m. and a banquet at 6:30 p.m. in the Marriott's main ballroom.

After the meal, 39 local dairy princesses representing 47 Pennsylvania counties, will vie for the title of 1983-84 Pennsylvania Dairy Princess. These young ladies have already been actively involved in promotional activities for milk and dairy products at the local and county levels.

Jolene Sue Snyder, 17, the 1982-83 Pennsylvania Dairy princess, will crown her successor at the conclusion of the pageant. Miss Snyder, the Beaver-Lawrence County Princess in 1982, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Snyder, Volant, Beaver County.

The purpose of the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Program is to promote milk and dairy products, the state's leading agricultural industry. Pennsylvania dairy farms annually produce more than 4 billion quarts of milk valued at $1.3 billion to the farmer. The state's dairy princess program is sponsored by the Atlantic Dairy Association, Inc., a dairy farmer funded program.

Tickets for the 1983 Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Banquet and Coronation are available at $12 each from the Atlantic Dairy Association, 355 North 21st Street, Camp Hill, PA 17011.

At silage-making time

The sights, smells and thoughts of drought

In some corn fields, the plants are not as stunted, but ears show little kernel development.

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

LANCASTER — It's corn chopping time – an annual benchmark in an agricultural year, particularly for a dairy farmer.

This is usually a time of fullfillment as a season of growth is harvested and put into storage for a season of feeding.

Typically as you steer down the rows and occasionally glance back to watch the mixture being blown into the wagon, your thoughts drift back to the time the seed went into the ground and slip forward to the coming cold winter mornings you'll walk into that warm barn to feed some of what you're chopping.

But this is not a typical year. It's quite a bit different from most any year you can remember.

Here are some sights, sounds and thoughts of what might be a typical dairyman as he pulls the tractor, chopper and wagon into his drought-stunted fields, particularly in southcentral and southeastern Pennsylvania.

The first thing that hits you as you pull into the fields is how far you can see. There's nothing to even partially block your vision. You got to stretch out and really crane the neck down to even see what you're chopping.

The sun always hangs low on the horizon on the mornings of silage-making time. There were years the sun shimmered and danced through the tassels that were about eye level as you moved through the rows. But not this year. In some spots, you even have to look to find

(Turn to Page A25)

Other sections of fields have corn plants less than three feet tall, but ears show more normal kernel development.

Bottle Bill Walk begins in Maryland

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

ANNAPOLIS — As Marylanders launched a Bottle Bill Walk across the state this week, legislation requiring mandatory deposits for throwaway beverage containers was making news in both New York and Pennsylvania.

In Maryland, one group of environmentalists left the West Virginia state line on Wednesday headed for Annapolis. A second group leaves Ocean City on Sept. 23 for the state capital and a joint rally on October 1.

In New York, a returnable container law went into effect on Monday. With annual sales of 7 billion containers a year, New York by far has been the largest container state among the nine with a mandatory five-cent deposit thus far.

And in Pennsylvania where legislation has been introduced, momentum is reported to be building in favor of the proposed law for the Commonwealth. A number of legislators, particularly from rural areas, report the bottle bill is uppermost in the minds of many constituents. And backing by organized farm groups is increasing, too.

The Maryland Bottle Bill Walk is being sponsored by Citizens Against Waste, a coalition of environmental groups established to push for a bottle deposit law.

As has happened in all states, the Maryland coalition is bucking the powerful anti-bottle bill lobby, which includes beverage manufacturers, the glass and can industries, store chains and even organized labor in these industries.

This lobby group claims that the bottle bills have cost jobs, increase prices and sales decline.

For example, the Brewers Association and the Can Manufacturers Institute say the New York law will cost consumers $400 million a year in higher prices for beverages.

But concerning jobs, Vermont reports about 500 new jobs have been created -- mostly at redemptiomn centers – because of the redemption law in effect since 1973.

Michigan's bottle bill, which began in 1978, has created some 4,600 jobs, according to the Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

Bills are scheduled to be considered in New Jersey and Rhode Island, which have laws before their legislators; and in Florida, South Carolina, Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D.C., which plan to introduce legislation in January.

In addition, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Minnesota, Wisconsin and New Mexico are considering laws.

Four Western states threw out efforts last November, including California, Colorado, Arizona and Washington.

Here in Pennsylvania, both backers of a bottle bill and opponents will be active again.

Pennsylvania Farmers Association reports it kicked off an all-out anti-litter campaign at Ag Progress Days.

Nearly 600 signatures were collected on petitions supporting bottle bills that have been introduced – H.B. 1341 and S.B. 463.

Sample letters to be sent to individual state legislators were also signed or distributed at Ag Progress.

PFA has also called on its county units to get busy in support of the bills and secure as many signatures as possible during the next two months. The goal is to have the petitions ready for the General Assembly when it takes up the bills in November or December.

Petitions will be available at annual county farmer association meetings or door-to-door canvassing drives will be held.

First in vitro twin calves born in Pa.

BY TRISH WILLIAMS

QUARRYVILLE — The first twin calves ever to be born from in vitro fertilization were very appropriately delivered on Labor Day, but without any labor to their true mother. Penn's Pride and Quintus, as the twin bull calves were christened, were conceived in tissue culture glassware, and carried to full term by a surrogate mother.

Born in southern Lancaster County at Pennstar Embryo Transfer Clinic, the twins are the culmination of years of in vitro fertilization and embryo transfer research at the University of Pennsylvania, Veterinary School.

Penn's Pride weighed in at 65 pounds at birth and Quintus at 45 pounds, according to Dr. Troop the attending veterinarian. They were born nine days early, said Troop, but that is quite normal for twins.

Another set of twin calves, also the result of in vitro fertilization research at the University of Pennsylvania were born dead the week before. The calves appeared normal and went to full term but had apparently died from calving difficulties, reported research specialist Karen Bennet. Thus Quintus earned his name as the fifth full term calf to be born from the in vitro fertilization process.

Project leader for the in vitro study, Dr. Benjamin Brackett, referring to the study said, "It is a collaborative effort between the University of Pennsylvania, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, and Dr. Troop."

Working on a grant from the National Institute of Health, with support and fresh semen supplied by Atlantic Breeders, and donor and recipient cows supplied by Dr. Troop, the team has broken new barriers in the realm of animal reproduction. Dr. Brackett a reproduction specialists and PhD biochemist, won world acclaim when, Virgil, the first calf to be born from an in vitro fertilization was born on June 9, 1981.

Brackett has been involved in in vitro fertilization research since graduation from the University of Georgia, Veterinary School in 1962. After completing a PhD in biochemistry, he joined the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the University of Pennsylvania, and was given a joint appointment in the Veterinary School. In 1974 he was promoted to professor of animal reproduction in the Veterinary School, and thereby switched his major and minor appointments.

Dr. Brackett presently serves on the Board of Governors of the International Embryo Transfer Society. Several years ago Brackett was called on by the United States Congress to review the field of animal reproduction and the associated new technologies.

"Congress was especially interested in predictions for the future," explained Brackett. "So we convened a small group of experts in artificial insemination, embryo transfer, and even cloning and genetic engineering. We then published a book two years ago entitled New Technologies in Animal Breeding."

Brackett edited the book, and helped to author it as well.

"Technology has evolved rapidly," said Brackett. "We could probably add a chapter or two to the book just from research in the last two years since the book was published."

Speaking more specifically about his own research, Brackett explains "Most of our work has been carried out in rabbits, with later extension to the cow. In vitro fertilization is now feasible in cows, we proved that with the birth of Virgil in 1980."

"The real challenge has been to treat the sperm outside the female reproductive tract," Brackett claims. "The sperm must be conditioned or capacitated to be able to fertilize the egg."

Much of Brackett's research has focused on in vitro sperm capacition. "We learned how to do this through a series of experiments. We learned that we could add a high salt medium to glassware containing the sperm to remove proteins from the sperm surface, that would enable the sperm to pentrate the egg and fertilize it.

The egg is recovered surgically from the donor cow. In a warm room (38 degrees Centigrade), the egg is inseminated by combining it with fresh 'raw' semen in tissue culture glassware. Raw semen meaning that it has not been treated with preservatives or extenders. The fertilized eggs are cultured in the warm room for a couple of days in the warm room, by that time they have reached the 4 cell stage and are surgically transfered into the oviduct of a recipient cow.

"This is a surgical procedure the way we do it now," Brackett explains. "We hope to develop it, to make the recovery of eggs easier, by recovering by means of laparoscopy. And if we can culture the fertilized eggs a little longer in the warm room, we should be able to transfer them into the uterine horn through the cervix, non-surgically.

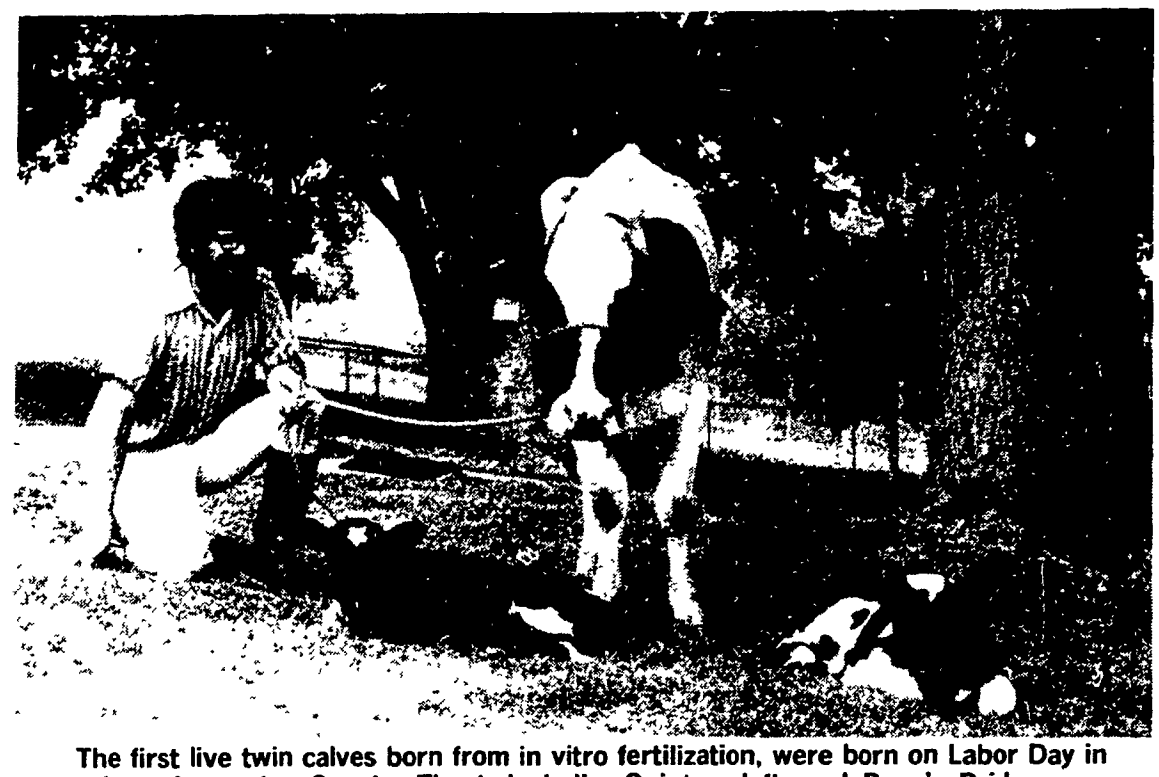
What are the advantages of in vitro fertilization over in vivo fertilization?

—The first advantage Brackett points to is to overcome infertility. "For example if eggs have been collected repeatedly from a cow, then the man-made damage might preclude sperm reaching the egg or undergoing capacitation, properly becoming prepared for fertilization. Yet we may still be able to get eggs that are normal from the cow that we can transfer into another cow. There are already a number of valuable cows that are candidates for this procedure. I think within a year this procedure will be in place as far as the initial efforts to overcome infertility in these animals."

—To maximize the utilization of semen from a valuable bull and eggs from a valuable cow. For example there are a number of very valuable bulls that are dead, and only a limited number of ampules of their frozen semen remains. It is desirable to have as many calves as possible from these valuable animals. So by bringing a few sperm cells from the frozen semen into close contact with a number of eggs from valuble cows, it should be possible to get more offspring than might be obtainned with just an insemination of the ampule into one cow, where you expect to get only one calf.

—To rapidly assess the fertilizing ability of sperm. This would greatly expedite young sire proving.

—In vitro fertilization used in concert with genetic engineering can very rapidly improve livestock. Such genetic engineering techniques as nuclear transfer, or direct injection of desirable genes into the pronuclear eggs, would be easier with a large number of synchronously developing embryos.



The first live twin calves born from in vitro fertilization, were born on Labor Day in southern Lancaster County. The twin bulls, Quintus, left, and Penn's Pride, were conceived in tissue culture glassware at New Bolton Center, the University of Pennsylvania, Veterinary School. Pictured with the twins are Dr. Carl Troop and the surrogate mother.

Brackett is pictured here with Virgil, the world's first in vitro calf. Virgil was born in June 1981, and still remains at New Bolton Center, the University of Pennsylvania's large animal research facility.

Reflecting back on his research and many accomplishments in animal reproduction, Brackett relates, "The most exhilarating thing is to look at human in vitro fertilization as an accepted clinical procedure today. This has evolved from the sort of reserch that we have carried out through the years, to improve the procedure, to define the conditions, develop the medium, that enable fertilization to occur in vitro."

Dr. Benjamin Brackett headed up the research team at the University of Pennsylvania that is responsible for the birth of the twins. Most of Brackett's research has been carried out in rabbits, and then extended to the cow.

$90,000 semen theft

WESTMINSTER, Md — An estimated $90,000 of Holstein bull semen was reported stolen from Coldsprings Farm Sept. 8, by Marlin K. Hoff, owner of the farm and the stolen semen.

Hoff, who serves on the board of directors for Sire Power, Inc., said he believed the theft had to have occurred between 9 to 12 p.m. Thursday night while he was driving to Sire Power headquarters in Tunkhannock, Pa. to attend a board meeting the following day.

"The semen could be accounted for at 9 p.m.," said the Carroll County dairyman, "But at 12 p.m. our hired man noticed the tank was missing. He thought I must have taken the tank with me to Tunkhannock, it was not until the following day that the theft was reported to the State Police."

Two liquid nitrogen canisters were taken from a storage shed. Hoff said the two canisters, one 5 gallon and one 2.5 gallon, contained only Holstein semen. Most of the semen was from very popular sires including, Elevation, Tony, Chairman, Spirit, and Bell. Approximately 95 percent of the semen was in French straws, the other five percent was in ampules, reported Hoff.

Hoff was not carrying any insurance on the semen, and will sustain a total loss on the stolen semen.

Because farmers and "semen jockeys" buy and sell semen among themselves, and there are no unique identifying marks on the straws or ampules, Hoff gives very little hope of being able to track down and recover the semen.

In a phone conversation Hoff stressed, "If a farmer does not want to buy stolen semen, they should buy only from certified representatives of bull studs."

Maryland State Police are urging anyone who suspects they are being sold stolen semen, or who has any information relating to the stolen semen to contact them at the Westminster Police Barracks, phone (301) 848-3111.

Winning Farmland Preservation logo selected by Lancaster County Ag Preserve Board is held by artist, Paul Snyder, of East Petersburg.

Farmland preservation logo winners picked

LANCASTER — There's a lot of interest in farmland preservation in Lancaster County among a group other than farmers.

That group includes graphic artists who entered a total of 83 designs in the logo contest conducted by the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board.

"We had an excellent participation in the competition that featured good art work," explained Alan Musselman, administrator for the Preserve Board.

"We first screened the entries and then judged and rejudged until we picked the top winners.

The first-place entry will be used in a number of publications and in various ways to provide identity for the Preserve Board."

The top three winners honored at the meeting of the Lancaster County Commissioners on Wednesday morning include:

First-place – Paul Snyder, 6475 Lemon Street, East Petersburg, an artist for Lancaster Newspapers.

Second-place – Carolyn M. Peifer, 260 Church St., Landisville, graphic artist.

Third-place – Denny Bond, 102 N. Barbara St., Mount Joy.

Honorable mentions went to David C. Loose and Lisa Madenspacher, both of Lancaster.

The first-place winner received a $200 bond; second, a $100 bond; and third, $50 bond.

Snyder's winning logo depicted land contours in the foreground with a farm silhouetted in the background.

"Most of the logo is respresented in the land since a farm is only as good as its land," Snyder said.

In addition to the County Commissioners and Musselman, the winners were congratulated by Amos Funk, of the Preserve Board, which judged the entries.

She was reserve grand champion at the York Fair last year and took the grand championship and best udder at this year's Farm Show.

In the Milkinmg Shorthorns, James and Christine Young, of Three Springs Farm, swept all honors.

Drought

any tassels – no matter how low to the ground they may be.

The smell of corn chopping always lifted the spirits, too. But this year the corn has a different smell – the smell of death.

Then, your conception of time begins to get mixed up. By this time last year, the wagon was already full and you'd be heading back out of the field. You glance back. The wagon isn't near full. The silage isn't even visible yet.

So you decide to stop and take a look.

The mixture of color hits you right away. Mostly brown, some green and very little yellow.

The mixture grates roughly in your hand. You start to wonder how much milk it will make.

You start to wonder about other things, too. Last year, about 25 acres filled the silo and you had 300 tons to sell off. This year it looks as if the entire 55 acres won't even fill it.

Last year, you picked 20 acres. This year, you don't have to decide which to pick and which to chop. All of it must go in the silo. And even then will it be enough?

You pull into the low section of the field. Remember how the spring rain delayed planting. But in a way it was a blessing. After the rain stopped completely and the searing sun arrived, the corn plant hardly grew. But the late planting delayed ear development. A fortunate couple of showers arrived at about late-ear-filling time.

Now in front of you are plants that you've never seen in a quarter century of harvesting the field. The ears on some plants are roughly a third as big as the whole plant.

But in most sections of the field, the plants are somewhat taller but there's hardly any ear, if there's any ear at all. If you husk one of the ears, it might resemble a mountaineer smile – lots of gaps.

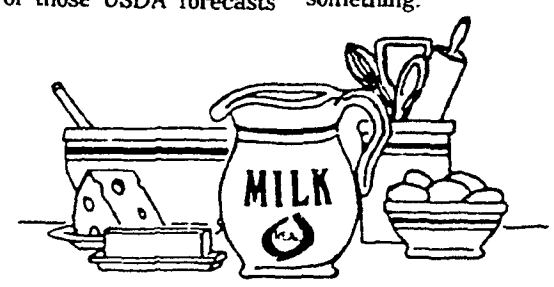
Your thoughts also drift back some 10 years ago when you decided to diversify and put in some layers.

Now, you not only have little and poor silage for the cows, but the price of poultry feed has gone out of sight.

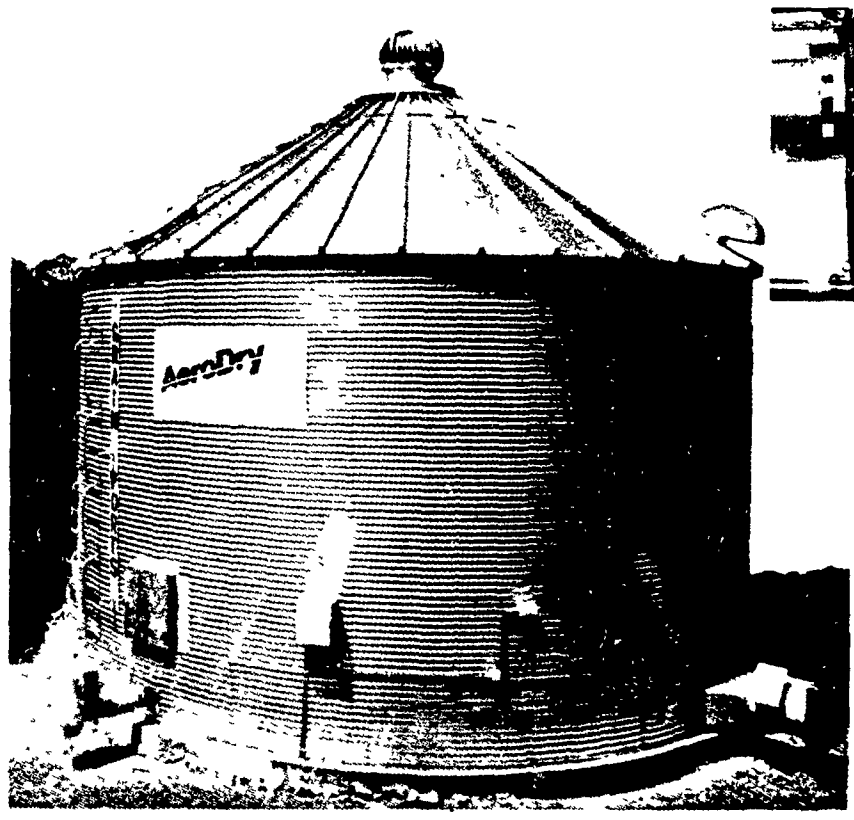
Just this morning you heard another of those USDA forecasts on the corn crop. Each one keeps going down.

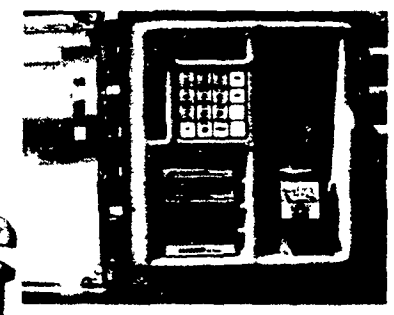
And you wonder if Block will finally do something. You heard that Japanese money that has been pouring into layer operations now is starting to go into confinement hog operations.

Well, maybe finally he'll do something.



THE AERODRY™ COMPUTERIZED GRAIN MANAGEMENT SYSTEM...





Grain drying with a difference

Dozens of grain growers throughout the area have discovered the AeroDry difference over conventional heat drying systems. They're making more money from their drying operation for four key reasons:

Reduced Shrink Loss
No heat means less damage in drying the grain. You get heavier corn with over 50% less shrinkage than heat drying, that means more grain in your bin.

Better Grain Quality
With AeroDry drying, grain isn't cracked or damaged by heat. More natural starches, sugars and other nutrients are retained for better feed quality and higher test weights.

Tax Benefits
AeroDry Systems qualify for up to a 15% energy credit in the form of an investment tax credit. Added to the 10% grain storage investment credit, that's a total credit of 25%.

The AeroDry System can be installed in any new or existing bin up to 16 feet high. If you're drying grain, or selling to the elevator, you can't afford not to see an AeroDry System. Please call or mail in the coupon and we'll send information and arrange a demonstration. Put the AeroDry difference to work for you.

Tremendous Energy Savings

The AeroDry System uses a unique fan and bin floor set-up to dry grain. It's computer controlled for maximum efficiency. Since no gas is used, no heat of any kind, energy costs are 25% of conventional heat dryers.

Korea buys 200 Pa. Holsteins

HARRISBURG — About 200 registered Pennsylvania Holstein dairy cattle are scheduled for shipment to the Republic of South Korea as part of a contract arrangement finalized through the National Holstein Friesian Association.

The arrangement was completed between the Korea Animal Improvement Association and the Brattleboro, Vermont-based organization. The 200 Pennsylvania bred heifers are among a total of 1,000 purchased by KAIA.

A total of 100 suppliers from Pennsylvania's top-notch dairy industry took part in the transaction, which calls for delivery of animals in six plane shipments. The first shipment left for Korea with 180 animals. The second shipment, which departed Sept. 11, had 183 animals – 79 from Pennsylvania – aboard. The final shipment takes place in mid-November.

Sang Gee Yi, with the Performance Testing Department of Korea Animal Improvement Association, met recently in Harrisburg with State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell.

Mr. Yi said approximately 320 South Korean dairy farmers, most of them KAIA members, will benefit from the program, which will help boost milk production to meet the needs of the country's 40 million people. The average dairy farm in Korea maintains 20 cows.

Farm Safety Week

"today's rural youth become the safety-conscious farmers and ranchers of tomorrow."

The FFA Chapter at Pequea Valley High School, Kinzers, has for the past three years taken an active role in promoting farm safety during Farm Safety Week. The chapter, under the direction of Clair Witwer, will again campaign among the farming community, passing out materials on farm safety.

Witwer said his FFA members distribute place cards, orange triangular safety stickers and posters among the farmers. A project for the members, the students are awarded on a point system with the number of visits to farms and the placing of stickers on machinery.

The project of the Pequea Chapter is just one way to educate farmers about farm safety. The United States Department of Agriculture offers other learning tools:

Be aware of hazards — Recognizing hazards is a first step in preventing accidents. Nearly four out of five agricultural accidents to youth involve tractors and machinery. To reduce these accidents, the Department of Agriculture suggests a "tractor operator only" policy in which no riders be allowed on machinery.

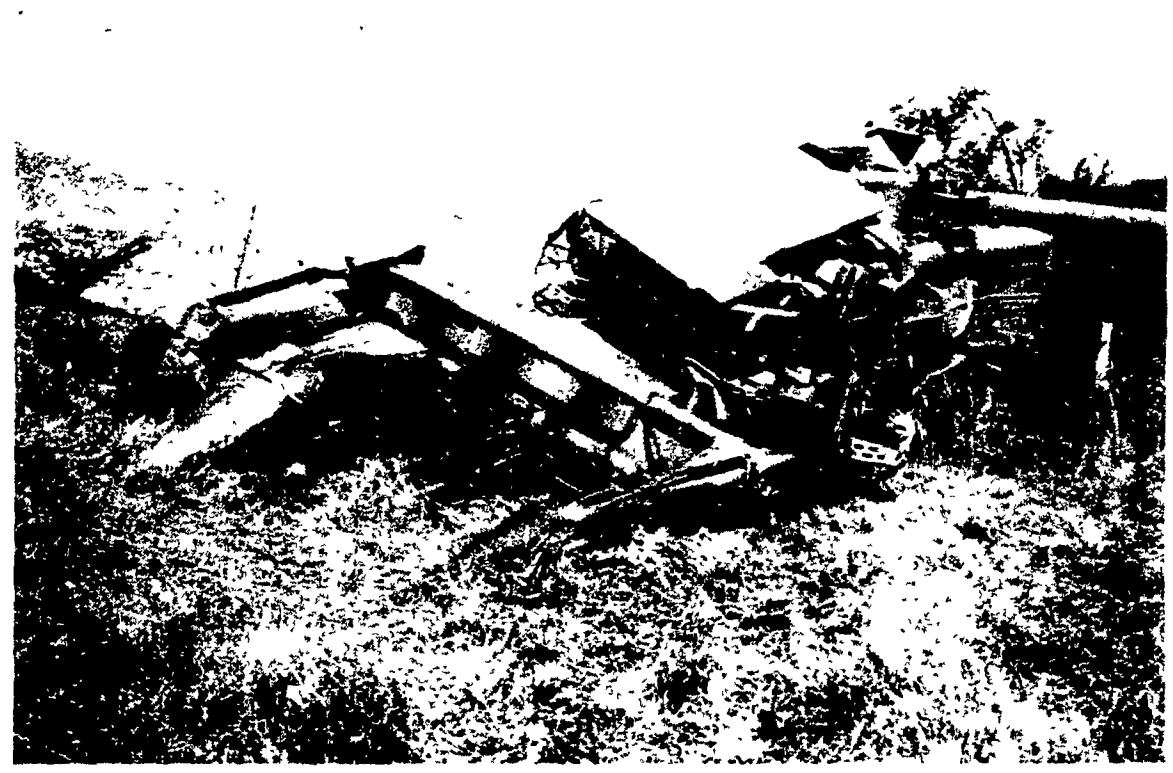
Positive attitudes — Taking action according to knowledge, experience and judgement helps boost a positive attitude. A positive attitude towards accident prevention encourages safety practice usage.

Training and education — All people operating equipment should be aware of how the machine works. Formal tractor operator training programs in most communities provide this education.

Protection — A primary form of protection is to assign youths only to those jobs they are physically and emotionally capable of handling.

In most other occupations, trained people are responsible for the safety and health of workers, said William D. Hanford, manager of the Council's Farm Department. But in agriculture, the safety and health job falls to the farmer himself, and he may not always be up to the challange, he added.

With statistics showing the number of farm-related accidents and deaths, farmers are reminded to place safety first. And for the 40th year of promoting farm safety nationally, the Council continues its efforts to reduce accidents with



Tragic accidents such as this are reminders to farmers of the need for farm safety

Crop loss relief reviewed

BY HAROLD SHELLY
Staff Correspondent

DOYLESTOWN — Bucks County farmers may soon be eligible for federal assistance for crop losses due to the drought which has plaqued the county for almost the entire growing season.

The Bucks County emergency agricultural committee met last week and recommended to the Bucks County Commissioners that they request federal aid, said David Tindall, spokesman for the four-member group.

Tindall, district conservationist for the SCS, said the almost 1100 farmers in the county are projected as having the following crop losses: 400 would have 30 to 39 percent loss; 250 would have 40 to 49 percent loss; 70 would have 50 to 59 percent loss; 50 would have 60 to 69 percent loss and the remaining 300 would have 20 to 29 percent loss.

Commissioner Chairman Elaine Zettick, when asked, said that the commissioners were aware of the action of the emergency committee, but had not received their letter. She said, "The Bucks County farming community is extremely important to the economy of Bucks County, and any request for federal assistance will immediately passed on to the proper federal authorities.

In an interview in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Chet Heim told Lancaster Farming that a total of 18 Pennsylvania counties, including Bucks, have been included in the request for federal aid by the State Emergency Board.

Heim said that Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture, Penrose Hallowell had conferred last week in Chicago with USDA Secretary John Block about drought conditions in Pennsylvania. He said Block discussed programs that could be implemented to help the farmers.

Among the options, was the increase in FmHA loans to farmers. Block also talked about opening up grazing on PIK land that had been planted with a cover crop for conservation purposes. He would allow beef, dairy cattle or sheep to graze this land.

Block is also investigating the laws available to the USDA that could assist farmers that need help. Heim also said that Secretary Hallowell has been monitoring drought conditions throughout the state since early July at the request of Governor Thornburg.

There are 11 USDA agencies involved with the State Emergency Board in reporting drought conditions, and it will take a declaration from US Ag Secretary John Block to actually get the drought relief for the farmers.

A 30 percent across-the-board loss for all crops must be shown before relief will be granted. Under this rule, a farmer could conceivably lose up to 100 percent of his corn for example, but if the other crops on the farm did not suffer at least 30 percent loss each, he would not be elegible for federal assistance.

Lancaster ASCS hay exchange

LANCASTER — The Lancaster County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service announces that it is providing assistance to livestock producers in locating hay or other roughage to buy. Lancaster ASCS will also help producers with excess hay or other roughage in locating buyers in need of their crop.

Due to widespread drought conditions this summer in many areas of the county, reports of hay shortages have been made. Some county areas are known to have a surplus of hay or other roughage. ASCS is compiling a list of all producers with hay and other roughage available for sale.

The list will include the following: name, address and telephone number of the producers, type of hay or other roughage for sale, approximate amount of hay or other roughage and an optional approximate price of hay or other roughage. Any interested producer should contact the county ASCS office at 397-6235.

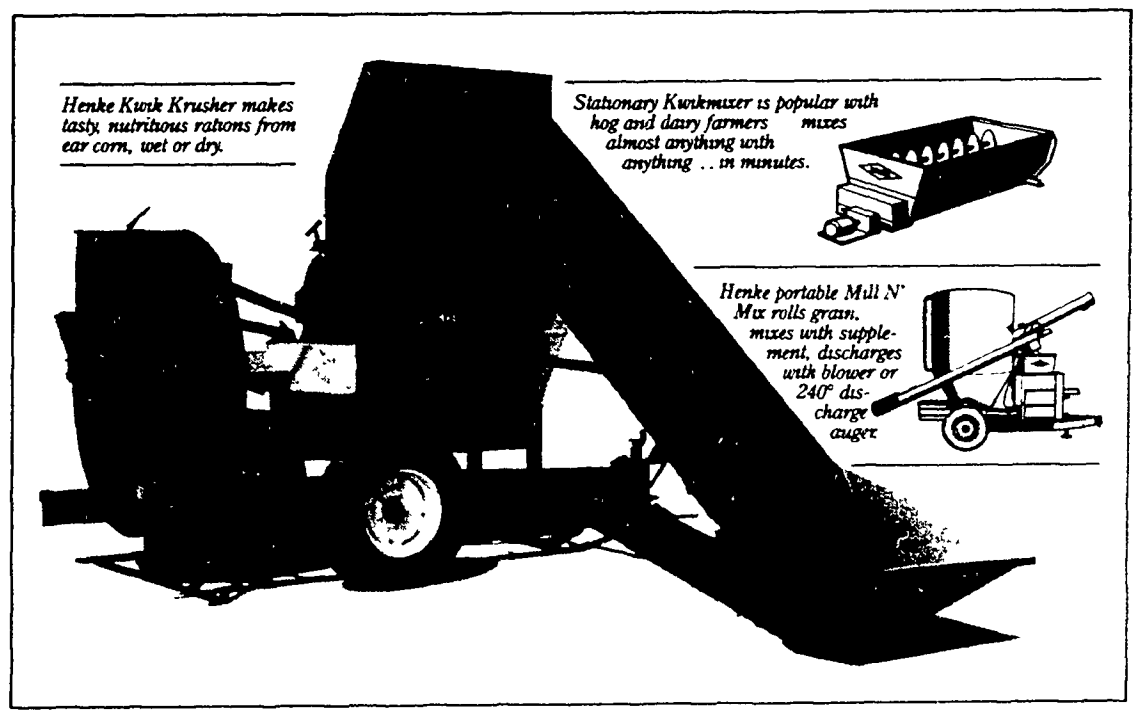
FEED THE WHOLE EAR WITH HENKE'S KWIK KRUSHER



Henke Kwik Krusher makes tasty, nutritious rations from ear corn, wet or dry.
Stationary Kwikmixer is popular with hog and dairy farmers mixes almost anything with anything . . in minutes.
Henke portable Mill N' Mix rolls grain, mixes with supplement, discharges with blower or 240° discharge auger.

Dairymen and beef cattle feeders agree crushed and rolled ear corn is one of the best feeds available for cattle. And for crushing and rolling ear corn nothing matches Henke's Kwik Krusher!

First the crusher head sizes the cob and shreds the husk. Then the built-in Henke roller mill further breaks up the cob and cracks the kernels.

The Kwik Krusher makes great dairy and beef cattle rations and it's fast, too... will handle up to 600 bushels of ear corn per hour, wet or dry!

Come in. Let us show you the Henke Kwik Krusher and tell you more about it.

Or, if you prefer, you can order a portable Henke roller mill with a high capacity blower discharge. It does a super job of rolling wet or dry shelled corn and putting it in upright storage.

Henke makes a portable Mill N' Mix vertical mixer and roller mill, too, with an ear corn mill as an option. And a Kwikmixer horizontal mixer that will mix grain with chopped hay, haylage, silage, molasses, dry or liquid supplement thoroughly and uniformly in minutes! Both machines are great for making top quality hog and cattle rations on your farm. Ask us for further information.

Last year's winners recapture awards at Solanco Fair

BY KIMBERLY HERR

QUARRYVILLE — This year's Holstein Dairy Show at the Solanco Fair Thursday was much like last year's event. Once again, Maurice, Paul and Mark Welk walked away with the show.

A two-year-old, owned by Maurice and Paul Welk was Grand Champion, and a three-year-old, owned by Mark Welk was Reserve Champion.

The Welk-Crest Farm, Wrightsdale, won last year's Grand Champion with a different cow, but the Reserve Champion was the same cow that won last year. They have been showing at the fair since 1977.

The Welk's Grand Champion is producing 80 pounds of milk per day after her first calf.

The Grand Champion two-year-old also won Senior Champion, and the Reserve three-year-old also won Reserve Senior Champion.

A cow owned by Maurice and Paul Welk won first in the best udder class, while cows owned by Paul Welk took first in both the best three female class and the dairy herd class.

The Junior Champion went to Kelly Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Miller, Christiana R1, who also won Reserve Champion of the junior exhibitors.

Kelly's senior calf was her first dairy animal. She purchased it from J. Mowery Frey, Willow Street, after winning $500 at last year's Solanco Fair.

Kelly won the money from the Royal Youth organization, which awards young people who exhibit and do well at the fair. Kelly won second place last year after ac-

Manure management on no-till corn at Crops Day

UNIVERSITY PARK — Application and management of manure on no-till corn ground will be a featured topic during Crops Day, September 27 at the Agronomy Research Farm of Penn State, nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45 West.

Tours will start at 9:30 a.m. and end at 4:00 p.m. Lunch will be available at the farm.

The results of surface applying dairy manure from a liquid manure storage onto no-till corn will be discussed by Raymond F. Shipp of the Department of Agronomy at Penn State. These results will highlight corn yields obtained when manure is incorporated as opposed to when manure is surface-applied without incorporation.

Dr. Shipp indicated there is a definite yield advantage to incorporating manure into the soil, either by injection or by heavy discing, over simply applying manure on the surface.

Because of the ever increasing costs of plant food nutrients – especially nitrogen, phosphorous, and potassium – Dr. Shipp says that farmers are taking a closer look at the value of these "big three elements" in their animal manures.

In recent years many Pennsylvania farmers have used a manure analysis service program available through county Extension services to determine manure plant nutrient content, to apply manure at appropriate rates, to save on fertilizers purchased, and to optimize yields.

Details on this Penn State educational service program will be presented. In addition, Dr Shipp will bring attendees up-to-date on other manure management research which is in the beginning stages at Penn State.

Dairy refund meeting

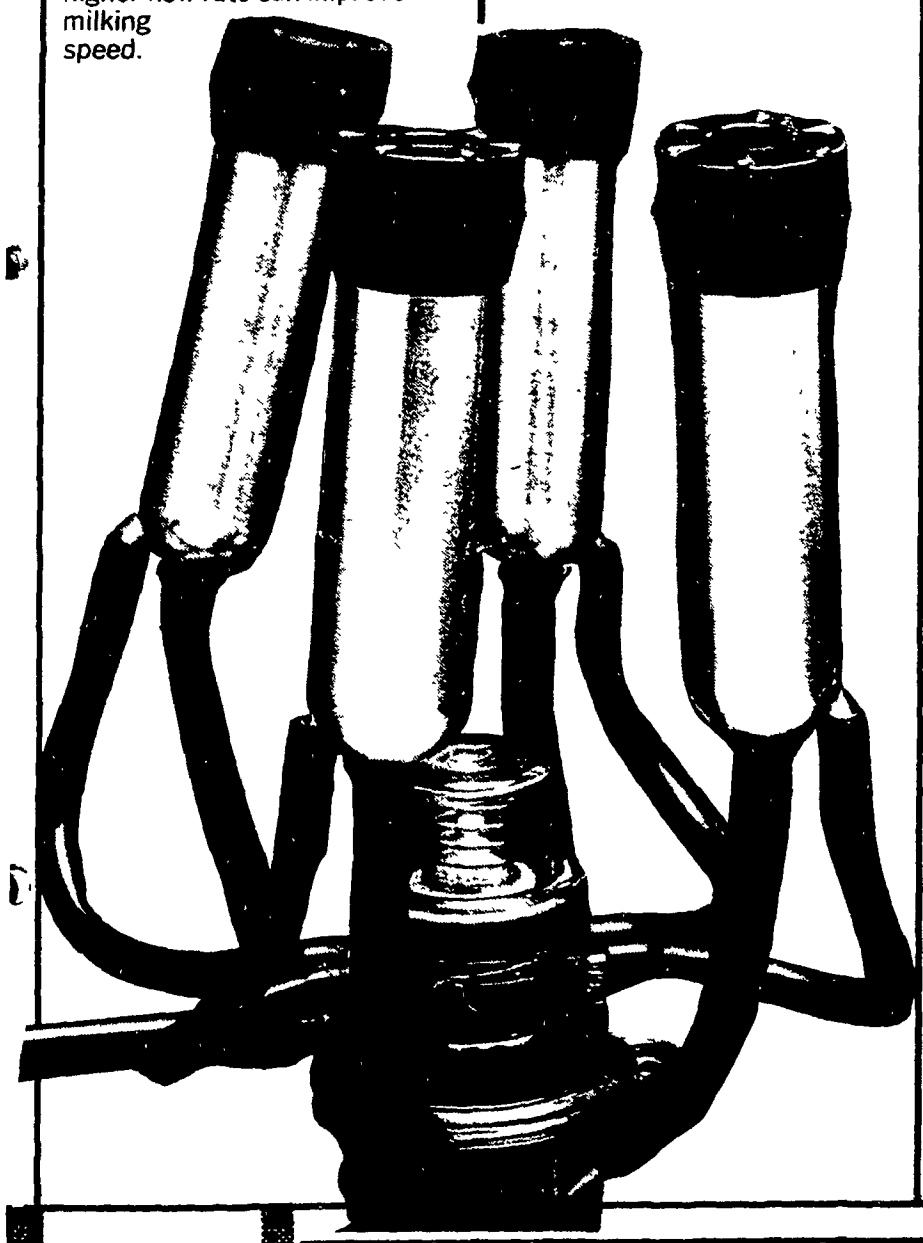
HONESDALE — An educational meeting to present information on several current milk marketing issues will be held Tuesday evening, September 20 at 8:00 p.m at the Honesdale High School.

John Monahan, County Executive Director of the Wayne County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service will be one of the speakers He will discuss the Dairy Refund Program and how dairymen who reduce production by at least 8 4 percent can secure a refund on the second fifty cent deduction.

Announcing the MLX System. A new generation milker from NuPulse.

SOME IMPORTANT FACTS:
About high producers The new MLX Milkers' bigger bowl, combined with the bowl's bigger inlets and outlet, has increased flow capacity substantially. And with high producers, higher flow rate can improve milking speed.

About one-line operation With the new MLX Milker, you have the option of either one-line or two-line operation (single source or separate vacuum lines for pulsator operation and milk removal).



About backflushing It will! The NuPulse MLX Milker with its special separating diaphragm has the ability to be used with backflush systems

About breakage The new MLX Milker body is made of tough, break-resistant transparent material and carries a 10-year limited warranty. Ask our competitors about their warranty.

About cleaning The design of the NuPulse MLX Milker allows more thorough cleaning-in-place than many other machines. The NuPulse Jetter system, with its turbulent washing action, allows for inplace washing in the parlor or milkroom. Also the MLX has a diaphragm which completely separates the bowl from the pulsator area

About maintenance costs The vacuum operated pulsator on every NuPulse Milker has only three moving parts and the dairyman can replace all parts himself.

On-farm experience shows that the durable NuPulse synthetic rubber inflations can last up to 3 times longer than others. All of this can add up to lower maintenance costs.

New rules for tobacco marketing quotas

WASHINGTN, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture issued on September 7 final rules to implement legislation which requires persons (but not individuals) who are not significantly involved in the management or use of land for agricultural purposes to either sell or forfeit their burley or flue-cured tobacco acreage allotments and marketing quotas.

According to Everett Rank, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the term "persons" includes govenmental entities, public utilities, educational institutions, religious institutions, partnerships, corporations, estates, and trusts. The requirement to sell or forfeit does not apply to an individual who owns a farm having a burley or flue-cured acreage allotment and marketing quota, he said.

Persons who must sell their allotments and quotas to prevent forfeiture must do so by Dec. 1, 1983, or Dec. 1 of the year after the year in which the farm is acquired, whichever is later. If the quota is not sold by the applicable date, the person shall forfeit the quota to the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee, he said.

The rules also set down guidelines for county ASC committees to determine whether such a person is "significantly involved" and establish provisions concerning forfeiture of allotments and quotas, Rank said.

A primary requirement for determining significant involvement is that the person's total gross income from the management or use of land for agricultural purposes during the three preceding years is more than 20 percent of the person's total gross income during the same period. The rules specify that required sales may be made only to producers who are or will become active burley or flue-cured tobacco producers within the same county.

The rules were scheduled to appear in the Sept. 8 Federal Register. Copies also will be available in county offices of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service soon afterward.

Independent egg producer

Master, vowed that efforts would be pushed on both the state and federal levels to attempt to get some help.

Wismer listed a number of things that could and should be done:

– Pennsylvania take action immediately against foreign investment and the federal government change tax laws that permit corporate investment as a tax shelter.

–Eggs and poultry be included in the Packers and Stockyards Act to force prompt payment to producers.

Eggs be included in the Farm Commodities Agreement Act so that supply-management referendums can be held.

–Pennsylvania pass stricter laws protecting egg producers and other farm commodity producers.

–Government grain be made available to poultry producers and other livestock producers at the $2.91 support price and not the PIK and drought-inflated market price.

–The Farmers Home Administration make lower interest loans available to poultry producers with 200,000 birds or less.

–Electric rates, which increased "unmercifully" for poultry operations, be rolled back for the remainder of 1983 and the first nine months of 1984. Wismer pointed directly to the Adams County Rural Electric Co-op.

Foreign investment – Japanese and West German primarily – was cited by the independent egg producers as a primary factor in their plight.

Foreign investment is putting new birds in faster than the independent producer is going broke, it was explained.

Japanese auto money was cited as behind the installation of some 15 million birds in Pennsylvania and surrounding states. And, of course, there's the huge West German complex in Ohio. Adams County has a West German installation, too.

These foreign investors only need to make money in six out of their first 12 years, the egg producers maintained.

"Independent producers all over the country want supply management," Jay Greider said.

"But if a decision is not made soon, the foreign investors will be able to control the vote if referendums are conducted on the number of birds owned."

"Independent egg producers are on the edge and if the banks don't continue to carry them, you're going to see a lot of bankruptcies."

John Hoffman, executive director of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation, questioned the need for putting poultry under the Packers and Stockyards Act.

He said he knew of only one processor contract for birds – Mandata – that didn't include time limits for payment. (Mandata recently declared bankruptcy.)

"I'll show a half-dozen different contracts that don't have any time limits for payment," replied Jim Aurand, of Lewistown.

But, in any event, if birds are included in the Packers and Stockyards Act (and it's questioned how well it is enforced), eggs are not.

Dorothy Sterner and Wismer directly challenged the attending legislators and Ag Sec. Hallowell to get the legislature to limit foreign investment in the egg industry.

State law now prohibits foreign investors from owning more than 100 acres of farmland. But that requirement is meaningless when you're talking about putting up huge egg complexes, the producers pointed out.

"We need to get that act amended now," Wismer said.

Pennsylvania was called the last stronghold of the independent family farm egg producer.

And, the producers point out, it may end up being just that – the last.

Cattle chemical patented

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A new type of chemical that will control scabies in U.S. cattle - with no apparent harmful side-effects - is being patented by U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists.

The new chemicals are dialkyl carbamates and thiocarbamates, according to USDA chemist Jan Kochansky, speaking at the American Chemical Society meeting.

"This new type of cattle dip is less toxic to animals than the pesticide toxaphene commonly used to eliminate scabies," reported Kochansky of USDA's Agricultural Research Service (ARS).

Ranchers may still use toxaphene as a dip for cattle with scabies. But toxaphene has been withdrawn from most other uses because the Environmental Protection Agency has found its risks to human health, and to the environment and widlife, outweigh its benefits.

The cost of scabies to the U.S. cattle industry is about $60 million a year, including both the cost of treating cattle with miticides and the loss in market value of infected cattle. Since October 1, 1982, there have been 102 outbreaks of the disease in 11 States according to USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS).

Pick-Your-Own Grapes Add Fun to Fruit

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

"We like people to have fun. They go crazy. They can't stop." These words are not describing a day at Hershey Park; they are describing the people who come to pick their own grapes at Manor Hills Orchard in Manor Township. For most it is a new experience, and one which they find totally enjoyable.

Sally Hofferth, whose mother Madalyn is orchard manager, says, "People are surprised at how easy they are to pick. There is no stooping or bending. It's fun to pick grapes. They are amazed at the big clusters, too."

Sally says she gives new customers one "mini-lesson" on how to pick before sending them off in the vineyards. "They need to learn to hold onto the cluster and to clip right above it."

This is the third year for pick-your-own grapes at Manor Hills Orchards, and it has proven to be a highly successful way of marketing the grapes. A few are also sold through local grocery stores and at the store on the farm.

The Hofferths began the pick-your-own grapes as an extension of the pick-your-own strawberry and raspberry business they have earlier in the season. Sally points out, "It was our experience with strawberries that people would rather pick their own. Lancaster County is a big pick-your-own market. It saves us labor, and this is a small family operation."

The family operation began seven years ago because Madalyn wanted to have a small fruit operation. Having grown up on a 500-acre farm in Indiana, she knew she wanted something smaller here. She raised her five children, bided her time and, as she puts it, "I had my eye out for a long time." When her youngest was nearly raised, she went to school at Millersville and got a B.A. in social studies and liberal arts. While she would have preferred agriculture, she adds, "Getting a degree gives you the confidence to go ahead and do things."

Madalyn's husband, Burt, is employed full time at Armstrong, but he is a valuable part of the operation.

He backs me up, and he loves being out here," Madalyn says.

So when the "right" farm came up for sale at public auction, Madalyn was prepared. She had the soil tested to make sure the 24-acre farm would support small fruit, arranged the financing and purchased it.

"It is handy to the road, on the south side of a hill and close to the Susquehanna River," she says. It is those famous "river hills" that help with the success they are enjoying with their fruit. Madalyn states, "It is ten degrees warmer here throughout the year." The farm is located on Seitz Road, off of Prospect Road, near Columbia.

Sally agrees that it is a good location.

"The south exposure here gets early ripening. We have a good east-west orientation and a nice movement of air," she says.

And, while most Lancaster countians were complaining about the heat and drought, the grapes just kept getting better. Sally explains, "Grapes love the sun. They liked the heat and the dry weather. The berry size is a little smaller, but they are sweet. When you sacrifice size you get increased sugar content."

Madalyn Hofferth, orchard manager, weighs grapes for Larry Ebersole, a customer from Elizabethtown. Madalyn purchased the farm seven years ago and now offers strawberries, raspberries and grapes on a pick-your-own basis.

The Hofferths now have 11 varieties of grapes on five acres, and are presently cultivating more land to add additional blue seedless varieties.

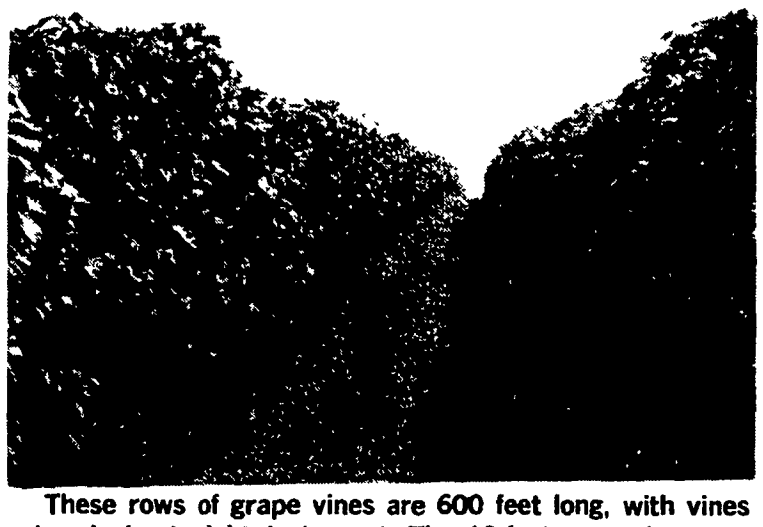
"We want to get into a meaty grape that people want," Sally explains.

They have Fredonias and McCampbells, both of which are blue seeded varieties. Sally calls them her early Concords because they are all used for jams, jellies and juices.

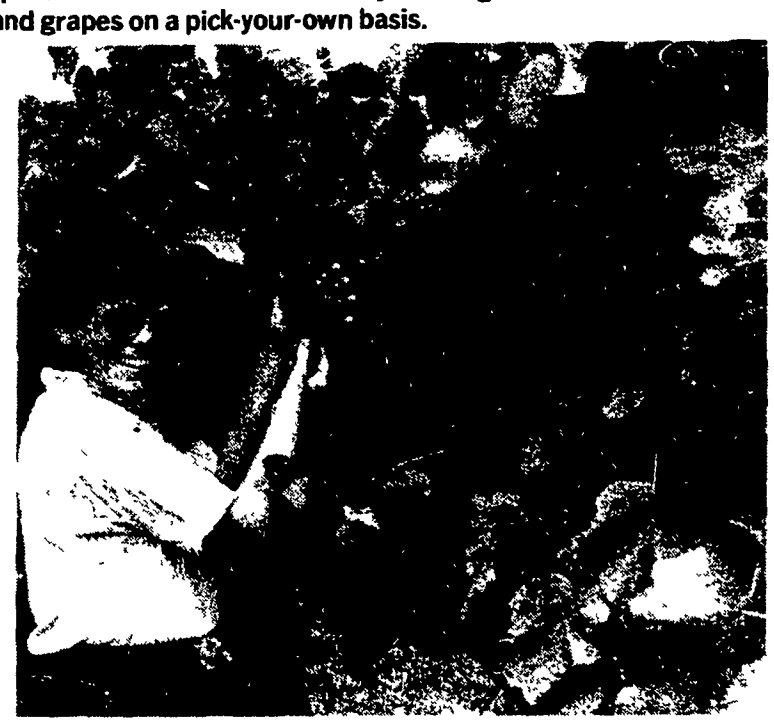
They have several varieties of seedless table grapes, which Sally says is a surprise to some people. There are Suffolk reds, a red seedless, and Himrods and Niagaras, both white seedless varieties. Steuben is a white grape suitable for both juice and home winemakers. Golden Muscats is another variety for juice or Muscatel wine. Foch, Delaware and French Hybrids are in the vineyards in very small amounts.

While it was difficult to decide just which grapes should go in the vineyards, Madalyn undertook making the decision in typical

(Turn to Page B4)



These rows of grape vines are 600 feet long, with vines placed about eight feet apart. The 10-foot space between rows is to enable mechanical spraying equipment to move through the rows easily. Manor Hills Orchard offers 11 varieties of pick-your-own grapes.



Sally Hofferth shows off some of the bunches of Suffolk Reds, a seedless table grape which they raise at their Manor Hills Orchard, near Columbia.

Wouldn't these make delicious tasting jam? These grapes are being picked by a customer at Manor Hills Orchard, near Columbia, in Lancaster County.

Manor Hills Orchard is a small family operation. Daughter Sally, who is a senior at Delaware Valley College, helps her father Burt adjust the cultivators as he prepares strawberries for the winter. Sally has taken over much of the spraying and other work in the vineyards on her summer vacation from college.

Fun to Fruit

fashion. She traveled to the Cornell University experiment station at Geneva to taste the grapes and learn about their cultivation. Sally points out that grapes respond differently to different soils, so the general area contributes a great deal to how they taste. Thus, wine grapes grown in Lancaster County may taste quite different from those grown in Erie County. Nevertheless they have been generally pleased with the plants they selected seven years ago and which have been bearing fruit for three years.

Picking the grapes is a small part of the total work involved in the vineyards. Pruning is a big winter job.

"We whack off a lot. We start pruning in January when I get off school at break. It takes almost all winter," Sally says. Sally is a student at Delaware Valley College studying horticulture, with an emphasis on small fruit.

Although Sally says she'd like to learn to make some grapevine wreaths with the prunings, she points out, "We burn most of the brush to prevent a carryover of disease. We burn anything that's left in the vineyard."

So far, she says, "We are very lucky. We have no insect problems, although as time goes on we may have. The pests are going to find us." Birds have already discovered that seedless grapes are quite tasty, but they have not become an overwhelming problem.

Spraying is necessary in any successful vineyard, and Sally estimates that they spray about 10 times a year. An air blast sprayer gives them good coverage and complete protection.

"Spraying is a preventive thing, and you must keep up with it," she points out.

Sally feels the fungicide program is the most important and the first two sprays of the season can go a long way in providing a good crop for the home grower. The fungicide should be sprayed on when there is one inch growth and then again with four to five inch growth. She says homeowners should follow recommended amounts on the bag for best results.

Sally recommends spraying when it is lightly raining or just after a rain when the droplets are still on the leaf. This will assure good protection since the fungus in water carried and not air carried.

Black rot, which causes mummy berries, and powdery mildew are two other concerns in vineyards. Powdery mildew can wipe out whole crops as it did one year with the golden muscats at Manor Hills.

How do you learn the ins and outs of small fruit growing? Sally says they have learned the most from talking with other growers.

"Everybody helps everybody," she says. "We learned from a combination of experience, mistakes and reading."

She points out that much information is available from experiment stations and from the Extension service.

There is a Southeast Grape Growers Association to which the Hofferths belong. This group welcomes anyone interested, and offers programs on marketing, table grapes and governmental regulations. It also holds trade shows.

"It is a good group. We have a lot of people from wineries and established vineyards as well as some homeowners," Sally states.

At Manor Hills, the season begins with asparagus which they pick fresh daily. This is the only crop which the Hofferths harvest completely, and Sally says she likes to snap it off at ground level. Next comes strawberries and then rasperries and next year they will have their first sweet cherries.

"They all overlap," Sally points out.

It is a rather long season, but Madalyn says she looks forward to the spring when the work will begin. "You get psychologically geared up for it, but by the end of harvest, I'm tired," she says.

Madalyn recalls that in the first four years before the fruit became so plentiful, "I did everything." Now she still does a lot, including being in the store on the farm for up to 12 hours a day. She also does all the bookkeeping, a job which takes a full month in the winter.

She is happy to have Sally taking an interest in the farm.

"I was hoping one of the children would like it," she says. "But all of the family has been great. If they have time, they come and help. Sometimes we have 10 family members here working. If family members want to see each other, they know where to find us. It keeps the family together."

Although the family presently resides near Neffsville, Sally says she will move to the farm when she graduates. In the meantime, they will continue to spend long days there to provide the public with fresh produce.

It is not just neighbors who come to Manor Hills Orchard. Madalyn says they have customers from Harrisburg, York and Coatesville. While they do advertise she adds, "Word of mouth really spreads. If people get good fruit they are willing to go that extra mile."

"We have a tremendous group of people. I can't say enough about the people who come here. They are so great," Madalyn says.

For pick-your-own enthusiasts, Manor Hills orchard adds the "fun" of pick your own grapes, something which is relatively uncommon in this area.

Breather bags and choice of bottom unloader with tapered power-driven sweep auger, or standard 6" auger unloader with clean-out sweep arm complete this system.

(2) OXYGEN LIMITING, GLASS-LINED SILOS

These smooth wall silos with glass-fused-to-steel protective coating are designed for high moisture grain and medium moisture forages. Breather bags and bottom unloader with power-driven sweep auger for grain, or chain unloader for forage and grain, complete this system.

(3) STOR-LIX® LIQUID MANURE STORAGE

Stor-Lix glass-lined tanks help preserve the nutrient value of manure; help protect the environment; and afford better management of time, labor and equipment.

The banner with the Most Club Participation Overall was created by the Silver Pails Goat Club. The Most Original Banner was awarded to the Furry Friends Club. Second place was awarded to the Hoofprints Horseless Club.

4-H Cookbooks Available

LANCASTER — Pennsylvania Friends of 4-H has published a cookbook, "Favorite Recipes of Pennsylvania 4-H Families: Appetite Pleasers." It is a limited, one-of-a-kind edition with hundreds of home-tested recipes from 4-H leaders and members throughout the state. The collector's item includes more than 450 recipes in the following categories: salads and salad dressings, soups and sandwiches, breads, main dishes made with meats, poultry, seafood and vegetables, vegetables, desserts, and side dishes.

In addition to American dishes, many different cultures are represented to reflect the diversity of cooking in Pennsylvania. Each recipe includes a nutritional breakdown of calories, sodium protein, potassium, carbohydrates, total fat and cholesterol per serving.

These Recipes Take the Cake

Now that summer's just about over, all those hot-weather clothes that show every pound can be packed away.

Great! Forget about your diet for a minute and celebrate with a nice, big piece of your favorite cake. Don't think about the calories, just concentrate on how wonderful it tastes.

And now that you are splurging, you may as well go all the way and try a couple new recipes. See how many you can sample before it's time to start next summer's diet.

FRUITED JEWEL CAKE

2 cups flour
1 1/2 cups ground oat flour (directions follow)
2 cups sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
4 eggs, beaten
1 cup vegetable oil
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1 8 oz. can crushed pineapple in unsweetened pineapple juice, undrained
1 1/2 cup chopped pecans

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease 10-inch tube pan or 12-cup fluted tube pan. In large bowl, combine flours, sugar, cinnamon, salt and soda. Combine eggs, oil, vanilla and pineapple; add to dry ingredients, mixing well. Stir in apple and pecans. Pour into prepared tube pan. Bake for one hour and 10 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pan. Cool completely on wire rack. Sprinkle with confectioners sugar, if desired.

Ground Oat Flour

Place 1 1/4 cups quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked, in blender or food processor. Cover and blend for about 60 seconds. Makes about one cup. To make more, repeat above directions.

WHITE MOUNTAIN CAKE

2 eggs
2 cups sugar
1/2 cup butter
1 cup milk or cream
2 1/2 cup flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla

3 eggs, separated
3 cups cake flour

Cream shortening and add sugar, gradually. Beat until fluffy. Add egg yolks and beat thoroughly. Sift flour, add salt and baking powder. Sift again. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk and flavoring. Beat thoroughly after each addition. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into greased pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes.

To Home on the Range readers, Mrs. Charles Biehl is a common name. You see her entries all the time, as every week, we count on Betty to send us her favorite recipes.

Betty said she likes recipes "where you don't have to go to the store for every little thing."

She is a busy lady, and, in fact, did not have time to have her picture taken this week. This is understandable as she is a cook at Harry Truman Elementary School and helps her husband in their outdoor furniture business.

Betty does find time, however, to keep a booklet of her favorite Lancaster Farming recipes.

"When I get stuck some night, I can always open the book," Betty said.

Try Betty's cake recipe, and keep your eyes open for her entries sure to be seen on this page in the future.

Be on Lookout for False Nutrition Claims

LANCASTER — Interest in physical fitness and athletic performance has grown by leaps and bounds but, unfortunately, says Dairy Council Inc., Southampton, Pa., athletes want to improve themselves so much they will try almost anything.

Serious-minded physical fitness enthusiasts may be fooled by promotional claims for foods, drugs, or nutrients that promise magic-like improvement. They may also be told to avoid eating some foods that are actually healthful.

Some of the myths surrounding body-building techniques, recreational exercises, or serious athletics are:

— The more protein and protein supplements you eat, the more muscle you have.

FALSE. Excess protein — like excess fat and excess carbohydrate — will be stored by the body as fat. Too much protein combined with too little water, can cause kidney or liver disorders. A normal diet supplies more than enough protein for muscle growth.

— Taking steroids will develop massive muscles.

FALSE. There is no proof that steroids can increase muscle growth or strength. In fact, steroids can stunt growth, cause acne, deepen voice, and alter sex organs.

— Eating honey, sugar, soft drinks, or sweets just before competition will provide a burst of quick energy.

FALSE. When high carbohydrate foods are eaten an hour or less before competition, they may produce low blood sugar — causing the athlete to feel weak or tired.

— Vitamins will give you more energy.

FALSE. Not one of the 14 known vitamins supplies energy. Some vitamins help the body use energy, but these vitamins are easily supplied by an athlete's normal diet.

— Amphetamines give you more energy to compete.

FALSE. There is no proof that amphetamines give energy or improve performance. In fact, there is proof they can be harmful. Side effects can be a rise in blood pressure, pulse rate, breathing rate, metabolism, and blood sugar. They can also cause headaches, dizziness, and confusion. The possibility of addiction makes amphetamines a poor choice for the serious athlete.

— Water during exercise causes an upset stomach and slows you down.

FALSE. There is no corroborating evidence. In fact, drinking water during exercise is very important. Drinking one-half cup of water every 10-15 minutes during exercise helps replace body fluids lost as sweat.

— Drinking milk causes cotton mouth.

FALSE. Cotton mouth (dry mouth due to lack of saliva) seems to result from emotional stress and a loss of body fluids.

— Muscle cramps are caused by inadequate salt intake.

FALSE. Cramps are caused by severe losses of water through sweating. Drinking water before, during, and after practice and competition can prevent water losses. Salt tablets can aggravate this condition by drawing more water out of the muscle into the stomach.

Athletic success is not due to some kind of magic, says Dairy Council. It results from a combination of natural talent, hard training, and plenty of preparation. Athletes, more than anyone else, can benefit from the four-food-group approach to eating — milk, meats, fruits and vegetables, and grains.

Count on the opera stitch

The "opera stitch" is a unique new embroidery technique. It is a way to stitch patterns on "aida" cloth, following counted cross-stitch or special opera stitch charts.

Because aida cloth has regular, even spaces for stitchery, the stitches are easy to do. With spaces in the cloth to guide you, opera stitch patterns nearly always look smooth, and even and symmetrical.

Aida is a type of evenweave cloth, currently popular for counted cross-stitch and available nearly everywhere. Because Aida is also the name of an opera, when June Cooper started embroidering the cloth, she named her stitching technique the "opera stitch."

The butterfly ornament chart pictured here is from Ms. Cooper's book "Opera Stitch Ornaments," (June Craft Publishers.) The book, sold at fabric and needlework shops, contains ornament projects, design charts and instructions for many different stitches.

The opera stitch ornaments are not only perfect for Christmas trees, but they also make wonderful sachets, pincushions, and decorative ornaments for any time of the year.

Here's an abbreviated version of the butterfly instructions:

MATERIALS: 6 inch x 6 inch square of 14-count aida cloth; cotton, satin, taffeta or other backing fabric; tapestry needle; lace; ribbon scrap; embroidery floss; stuffing; sewing supplies.

CENTERING: 1. Fold fabric in quarters to find center. 2. Find center of your charted design. 3. Counting one square of fabric for each square on your graph, find the top of your design. 4. Count left to find first square of design. This is your starting point. 5. Position fabric in hoop.

STITCHING: 1. Thread needle with two strands of floss. 2. Stitch design according to chart, using stitches described below, or stitch as desired. 3. Instead of knotting end, hide end under stitches on back of fabric.

OPERA STITCHES: a. Work "Y-stitch" from top to bottom. b. Work "back-stitch" down column of holes, two at a time. c. Begin "French-knot stem" at bottom of column. After twisting thread around needle, move up to next hole to go back into fabric. If knot pops to back, repeat stitch in same pair of holes.

ASSEMBLY: 1. Trim aida cloth into a butterfly shape, leaving an inch and a half margin around stitching. 2. With right sides together, baste lace around aida cloth, matching raw edges. 3. Baste ribbon scrap to top edge for hanging. 4. With right sides together, baste aida cloth to backing.

FINISHING: 1. Machine stitch around edges, leaving a small opening for turning. 2. Turn to right side. 3. Stuff and sew closed with tiny hem stitches.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

When it comes to possessing "character," few structures can rival the rugged solidity, the sense of security and stability, and the historic heritage encompassed in a traditional, beautiful, old barn.

Barns encompass a micro-community, made up of the life that abounds therein. Spiders busily fill corners with symmetrical webbing, and mice scurry silently on their rounds of the granaries.

Pigeons and barn swallows slip through slender openings between roof and sides, occasionally falling prey to old mother cats who wisely hide their kittens deep in the snugness of a haymow.

To farm kids, barns are a handy, in-house amusement park, providing sites for tunneling through stacks of itchy straw, building a secret fort from which to spy on your siblings and friends, and, inevitably, a rope that tempts one to swing, Tarzan-style, into the adjoining pile of hay.

Mothers frown on that last bit of enjoyment, but what do they know anyway, about all the important stuff you can do in a barn?

Like many in this part of the country, our barn is an old one, and we believe it has probably seen a century birthday, although we have no exact date of its building.

Often I've wished the worn, dusty boards could talk. Maybe they'd confide about the farming techniques and way of life of those others who preceded us here, who walked the same soils, drank from the same spring, toiled with in the barn's walls.

Maybe the tales would be of threshers that came to harvest grain, belching sparks and smoke, or of teams of horses hauling wagons piled high with loose stacks of hay to feed the cattle once stabled beneath.

Maybe even humorous confessions of other generations of youngsters, who also gave into the lure of the enticing, heavy rope dangling from the upper beams.

But lately, if the barn had been able to talk, it probably would have been calling "Help!" For, like you and I, the barn's age has been catching up with it.

When a support post was kicked out from beneath a chock-full hay mow, the barn was reduced to a crippled state until the hay could be moved. Then, February's blizzard sifted the main portion of a heavy drift onto the middle of the roof; and the tired old, rotted shingles and lathing finally gave in, with a gasp that left a gaping split down the side.

Surgical repairs are well underway, but it was what we found when they "opened it up" that has been most fascinating. The main beams are chestnut, hand hewn, and the ax-stroked cross beams still bear the Roman numeral markings of identification put on them by skilled craftsmen, so the pieces went on the skeleton in proper order.

An abundance of kindling wood, laced with lots of rusty nails, is just about all that remains of the old roof. New oak, lath from our woodlot and sawed by the neighborhood sawmill, adds our own personal touch to the barn which each owner has indelibly marked in some way.

And we hope that the master builder who put the structure together with obvious pride and care is happy with the new white metal roof that is intended to protect his creation for an even longer stretch of history.

Repot Houseplants Now

MEDIA — Whether houseplants are vacationing out-of-doors for the summer or have remained in the house, they are in more active growth now than in fall and winter. As a result, says Mary H. Meyer, Delaware County Extension service horticulturist, they may be getting potbound, especially if they have not been shifted to larger quarters, or divided, in several years.

How does one know when this condition occurs? Inspect to see if roots are growing out of the drainage hole or, if the the plant is small enough, knock it out of the pot, and look for yourself. There will always be some roots evident, and generally plants prefer to be somewhat potbound. You must use your own judgment, and if roots appear severely massed on the outside of the soil ball, now is a good time to repot.

This could have been done earlier this spring, but now is just as good because the plants will remain outdoors for another month and will have an opportunity to reestablish in the new container before they're returned indoors. When you desire additional plants, division of the pot-bound plant is an excellent answer. Otherwise, step the plant up into the next size (but no greater!) diameter container.

For instance, a plant in an 8" pot could be moved-up into a 10" diameter one. When repotting these tight-knit roots should be carefully loosened and teased out from around the edge of the mass. This is extremely necessary and will help the plant reestablish more quickly. As always use a well prepared media that would generally contain 1/3 sterile soil, 1/3 peat moss, and 1/3 coarse sand or perlite. This will provide both good water retention as well as adequate aeration. Water thoroughly and return the plants to their previous location.

If swamps are not preserved, the crocodiles may be in serious trouble.

Crocodile Has Little to Smile About

The mouthful of teeth that ring the crocodile's snout may look like a smile. But the fact is, most crocodiles have little to smile about.

Though they've been around for some 200 million years, crocodiles are struggling to survive. Many species, and especially the American crocodile, aren't doing very well.

American crocodiles, shy cousins of the fierce man-eaters of Africa and Asia, used to be plentiful along the Pacific coast, throughout the Caribbean and along the southern Florida coast. But that was before man started killing them for their valuable hides and turning their swampy homes into housing developments and parking lots.

Today only a few hundred American "crocs" are left in the United States. Most of them are

DOGS WERE THE FIRST WILD ANIMALS TO BE TAMED. THE CAVEMEN HAD TAME DOGS THOUSANDS OF YEARS AGO. MANY SCIENTISTS BELIEVE THAT THE WILD ANCESTORS OF THE DOGS WERE WOLVES. FOSSILS OF 30-MILLION-YEAR OLD "DOGS" SHOW THAT THEY WERE VERY MUCH LIKE THOSE TODAY. THE "CYNODICTIS" A DOG-LIKE MAMMAL EXISTED 40 MILLION YEARS AGO.

Cool Weather Coles

Some garden vegetables, like tomatoes, insist on hot weather. But the cabbages and their relatives like it cool, helping you hurry the garden harvest in the spring, and extending it in the fall long after the hybrid tomatoes have blushed their last.

In some mild winter areas, members of the cabbage family grow all winter long. And, one edible member of the cabbage family, ornamental kale is so colorful, it's widely planted as a cool weather ornamental, primarily for its colorful leaves of purple, blue, grey and white. Perfectly edible, it makes a wild-looking salad or soup.

Cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower and Brussels sprouts are the garden standbys of the cabbage family, not only good to eat, but forming attractive plants, too.

With cabbage there are two ways to lengthen the harvest season. One is to plant varieties which mature at different seasons. 'Ball All-Seasons Mix', available at garden centers as started plants, and introduced by Ball Seed Company, is a formula mix of three different F1 hybrid cabbage varieties. Each variety has a different maturity to lengthen the cabbage harvest from an early spring planting.

The other way to extend the cabbage harvest is to replant cabbage after the peas or other early spring vegetables are harvested. It makes sense because each square foot of garden space does double duty.

Brussels sprouts are ideally planted after the early season vegetables, from transplants in late June or July. They mature in late summer and fall and can be harvested over a long season. Sprouts mature from the bottom of the plant in sequence as long as the weather permits. Twist off leaves from beneath the lowest sprouts and they'll continue to develop. Pinch out the growing tip of each plant in early fall if you want all the sprouts to mature at the same time. 'Jade Cross' F1 is the most popular variety.

Broccoli, grown like cabbage, will produce its edible flower buds faster than cabbage, but it can be harvested over a long season because once you've cut the large center head, side shoots will develop into small clusters. Catch broccoli before the yellow flowers open. The two most popular varieties are 'Green Comet' and 'Premium Crop', both F1 hybrids which will produce in about 47 days from transplanting.

Cauliflower cannot stand as much cold as cabbage and won't head up properly in hot weather. When the head starts to develop, tie leaves together over the curd so that it turns milky white. Planted at the same time as cabbage in the spring for an early crop, it can also follow early summer crops for a fall harvest. Favorite cauliflowers are 'Snow Crown' and 'Snow King', both F1 hybrids. 'Snow King', for example, will mature in about 45 days from transplanting.

found in Florida's Everglades National Park.

Saving the crocodile--which is also related to the American alligator--won't be easy because of increasing pressures to develop the swamps in which he thrives. The problem--habitat loss-is the same one that threatens many other endangered species across the nation.

Scientists with the National Park Service are now trying to learn more about these rare reptiles. If they can find out how fast crocodiles grow, where they go after they hatch, how much room they need and how they die, National Park Service researchers say they might be able to help save the "croc."

To get answers to their questions, scientists have started tracking baby crocodiles by fitting them with radio transmitters. Signals from the transmitters tell scientists how far crocodiles travel, and also allow them to trap the little reptiles periodically to measure their growth.

Adult crocodiles pose a more difficult problem for researchers. They're harder to find and harder to catch. Scientists use snares to nab the adult crocodiles, which are weighed, tagged and released. Then researchers follow the tagged adults in planes and helicopters for days to learn how fast and how far they travel.

The researchers now believe that most baby crocodiles are eaten by large birds and fish before they're a year old. Rangers with the National Park Service also report that crocodiles in the Everglades may be making a comeback. There are a few more nests in that park than there were 10 years ago.

Still, the researchers are worried about the crocodile. It all comes down to swamps, for unless that wet, spongy terrain is preserved, the crocodile could follow the dinosaurs down the path of extinction.

FFA'ers Win at Allentown

ELVERSON — Eight members of the Twin Valley FFA Chapter at Morgantown participated in the livestock judging contest at the recent Allentown Fair. Gail Raser, Glenmoore, finished sixth, the best of any Twin Valley competitor. Bert Zerr, Geigertown, was eighth, and Beth Morgan, Buck Hollow Road, was 10th.

Other Twin Valley livestock judges were Rick Kimball, Mark Zerr, Lori Ortiz, Rich Geedy, and Kevin Griest. The Twin Valley team of Gail, Bert, and Beth finished second in team competition to a team from Lehigh County FFA.

Livestock judges placed six classes of animals - Cheviot ewes, Polled Hereford heifers, and mixed breed gilts all of which were evaluated on their characteristics for breeding animals. A class of lambs, crossbred steers, and market hogs were evaluated as market animals ready to be slaughtered. Market classes are evaluated on the basis of their carcasses potential to yield a large percentage of lean, high priced cuts of meat. Breeding classes are evaluated on the basis of their potential for producing offspring as well as their potential for having desirable carcasses. Classes of four animals are placed from best to worst by the student competitors, with their results being compared to those of an official judge. The person whose results agree most closely with the official judge is the winner.

In other judging contests, Kevin Stoltzfus, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stoltzfus, RD 2, Elverson, and a first year student in vocational agriculture at Twin Valley High School, was the winner of the FFA division of the dairy cattle judging contest at the recent Allentown Fair. Other Twin Valley students who placed in the top 10 were Pam Trostle, Green Hills, fifth; Glenn Stoltzfus, Morgantown, seventh; and Chris Cylcewski, Green Hills, ninth.

The Twin Valley dairy judging team of Kevin, Pam, and Glenn finished second to a very strong Tulpehocken team. Other Twin Valley FFA members who judged dairy cattle were John Noyes, Ann Kline, Tammy Lush, Chuck Reiff, and Chris Coblentz.

Dairy judging contestants placed six classes of dairy cattle - Holstein senior yearling heifers, Jersey aged cows, Brown Swiss junior yearlings, Guernsey young cows, Holstein two year old cows, and milking shorthorn cattle. In placing a class each FFA member must evaluate the four animals trying to pick the best, second best, etc. The way the student places the animals is then compared to the placings of an official judge.

The FFA club was also successful in other areas. Thirteen members of the Twin Valley FFA chapter displayed their projects, capturing eight first place awards. In the project book contest Pam Trostle received a first place for her wildlife conservation book. Bert Zerr received a second place award for her single enterprise laying hen record book. Mark Zerr received a fourth place award for his multiple enterprise record book.

In vegetable classes Beth Morgan received a first place blue ribbon for her flat green beans, a second place for her round green beans, a third on her pumpkin pie, and fourth place for her peppers and zucchini. Tom Morgan showed the first place cherry tomatoes and fifth place zucchini. Lori Ortiz exhibited the second place large tomatoes. Mark Zerr showed the first place red cabbage and third place regular cabbage.

Rich Geedy constructed and showed the first place conservation exhibit. Pam Trostle's crown of thorns placed first while Chris Cylcewski's hanging basket was second. Chuck Reiff displayed the third place brown eggs.

Kevin Griest showed the first place clover hay and second place oat straw. Bill Kirk showed the first place alfalfa hay. Dwight Houck displayed the second place corn stalks with Glenn Stoltzfus' placing fourth.

Capping the awards was a first place for the chapter exhibit-Designer Genes for Agriculture.

Food Exposition Celebrates Pa. Products

Terrance L. Wingert, Lancaster, enjoyed an ear of corn, purchased from Sandbank Orchard, Shippensburg, one of the many standholders at the Food Exposition. Other foods available were baked potatoes, lamb stew, maple milkshakes, fresh fruit and chicken barbeque, just to name a few.

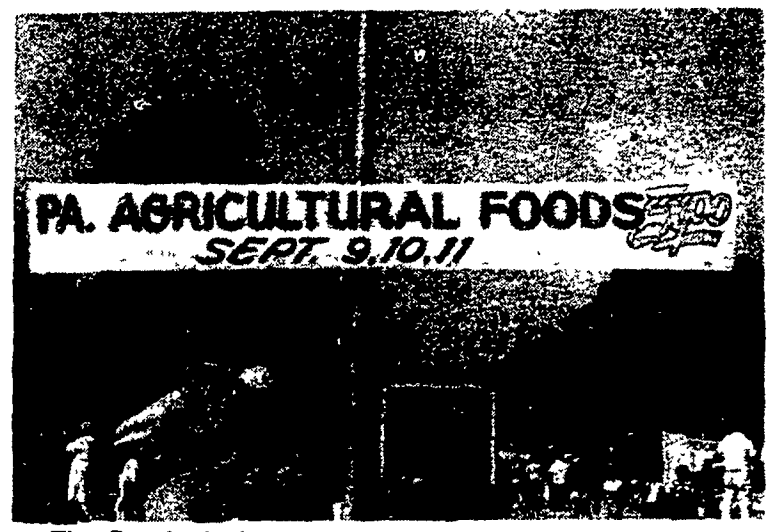
An ice sculpture of an eagle, featured at the Food Expo, held up surprisingly well inspite of temperature that reached the upper 90's.

Benjie Nathans, from Cheyney University of Pennsylvania, demonstrated how to use chef's "tools of the trade" to turn Pa. grown fruits and vegetables into various shapes. Above, a cantaloupe becomes a basket.



The Pa. Agricultural Foods Exposition, which took place Sept. 9, 10 and 11 at Independence Mall, Philadelphia, was designed to "promote Pa. food products," according to Pa. Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell.

Pa. Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell enjoyed a cool, creamy milkshake Friday during the Food Expo. Pictured with him is a representative from Interstate Milk Producers.

When you're the nephew of a potato queen you have to do all kinds of silly things. Michale Scott Zimmerman, nephew of Tammy Zimmerman, the 1983 Pa. Potato Queen, dressed in his Mr. Potato suit to help promote potatoes at the Food Expo.

WHAT THIS MAN KNOWS ABOUT FARMING COULD FILL A BOOK... A BANK BOOK.

Farming. It's a complex business. No surprise to you, of course. We only mention it because when it comes to getting a farm loan, we know you don't want to have to start at ground zero and explain the expenses of livestock, machinery, construction, mortgages and operating expenses to a novice loan officer.
Which is why we suggest you turn to Bob Badger, the head of our Agricultural Loan Division. Bob knows farming — inside out and upside down. He's been helping our community's farmers meet their business objectives for years. So when it comes to farm loans, he takes a very interesting point of view ... yours.
Next time you need to talk to a banker about financing your business, talk to the banker who understands your business ... Bob Badger at Bank of Lancaster County. Visit Bob at our Strasburg office or give him a call and ask him to visit you.

Fresh Citrus Earns High Marks for Fall

Whether taken from a kitchen fruit bowl, a brown paper bag or a cafeteria lunch line, fresh citrus fruits are now in plentiful supply, ready to provide "golden" opportunities to back-to-schoolers.

Because of a record-breaking valencia orange crop this season, valencias are likely to be one of the best produce buys during the weeks ahead. This is the most abundant valencia crop we've had since the mid 1940's. Combined with the bumper navel crop just completed, California-Arizona's orange crop is the largest ever produced in one year.

Because each valencia tree produced so much fruit this season, individual oranges just didn't develop to their usual large sizes. But these vitamin C-rich, "kid-sized" fruit are very good juicing and eating oranges, perfect for lunch boxes or after school snacks.

Don't be fooled by the green that appears on the outside of some valencias. This "regreening" phenomena occurs as the orange hangs on the tree and its golden peel reabsorbs the green pigment. "Regreened" oranges are fully ripe and juicy. Cutting them into easy-to-eat wedges is one way to show their beautiful interior. Wedges, wrapped in plastic, are perfect for eating anytime.

Taste-tingling grapefruit, brimming with California sunshine and vitamin C, are perfect for waking up sleepy appetites. And this season there will be abundant supplies. But they, too, will be running slightly smaller in size than usual. However, their eating quality and beautiful appearance are unmatched.

A new crop of superior-looking lemons from the western desert regions will also be arriving this fall, ready to add zest to beverages, salads, vegetables and other nutritious foods. This new lemon crop will be of excellent quality, have good volume and offer a range of sizes as the season progresses.

Techniques for Discount Shopping

Bargain bins, five minute specials, and buying fever can cost you a bundle if you are not prepared when buying clothes at discount stores.

To be a cool customer and a wise consumer you need to be well armed with a list of what you need and how much you can afford to spend. Once you have these, here are a few extra survival techniques that may protect you from costly impulse buying.

—Don't go unless you are prepared to buy. What you see today may be gone tomorrow. If you intend to use a check or credit card, note store policy before you buy.

— Shop when you feel full of energy and are looking good. Be prepared for a little crowding, allow more time than you ordinarily would, and expect delays at the check out line.

— Go dressed for easy changes so you're prepared to try on everything you select before you actually buy. There are many reasons items are sold at discount and it's up to you to decide if a flaw is worth the price.

— Make a quick tour of the store before you begin to select in earnest. Some stores are organized as a series of boutiques and not all of what you are looking for will be in the same place. Often best buys are in a back room or on a separate rack.

— Look over garments carefully and don't depend entirely on sizing tags - clothes may be improperly marked. Look for tears, irregular stitching and coloring, broken zippers, and stains.

— If you've found something you like, have tried it on and like the style, fabric and fit, carry it around with you for a few minutes while you look further. A second look at something you've selected may save you from an "almost" good bargain.

Stress: A Farmer's Occupational Hazard

BY KIMBERLY HERR

LANCASTER — The sun beats down on row after row of corn, brown from too much heat and not enough rain. The hard seat of the tractor digs into cramped thigh muscles and a dull ache climbs slowly from the lower back to the shoulders and finally settles in the neck, adding to the torment of seeing a crop reduced to half its value.

The day started 10 hours ago, and there are at least half that many left in the day. The forecast is predicting weather unsuitable for harvesting, and much of the crop is still in the field. If the weather does not hold, the value of the crop will be reduced even further, and there are bills to pay and college-age children who need help with tuition and books.

The work days are long and exhausting, so why is sleep impossible, and why does food, needed for energy, seem unappealing? And why do the younger children seem louder and less disciplined?

The answer: STRESS. It is an often unrecognized, potentially hazardous ailment that is becoming more and more common among farmers. In a recent national study, the job of a farm manager ranked 12th in stressfulness among 130 occupations studied.

"Farmers deal with uncontrollable situations," explained James Van Horn, a professor of rural sociology at Penn State University. "Number one is the weather, and the economical aspect of farming is not under the individual's control either. A person does not know what to do to cause a better outcome."

Sometimes when times get tough, farmers, as well as others, will turn to ministers or physicians for guidance.

Dr. Paul Herr, a family physician in the Quarryville area, has many farmers as patients. He agreed with Van Horn.

"There is a lot of stress in the financial end of farming and also in the weather," Dr. Herr explained.

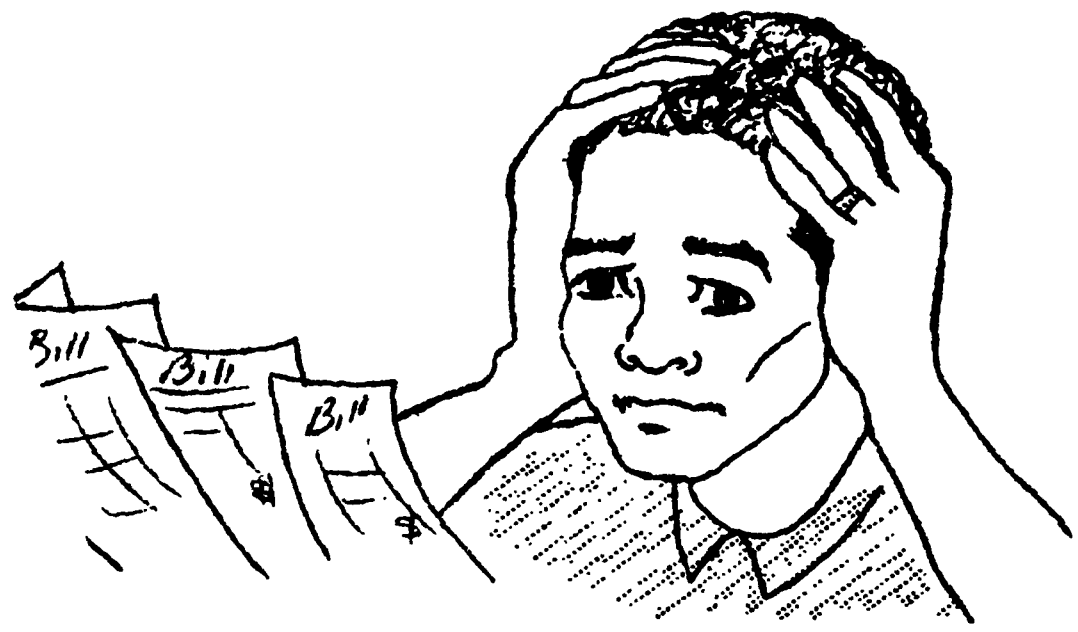
Both men agree that farmers may be forced to deal with more stress than people in many other fields.

"I think the incidences of severe stress-related mental illness is just as big as anything else," Dr. Herr said. "Certain groups of farmers have just as high of a suicide rate as any other group of people. Depression and anxiety are quite common among farmers."

One of the reasons why farmers have been subject to increased doses of stress is that farming has changed. It is no longer as physical as it once was.

"Farming is hard work," said the Rev. James Powl, of the First Presbyterian Church of Strasburg, who grew up on a farm and has many farmers in his church. "The labor part of farming has eased off, but the emotional part is heavier than it was.

Powl thinks stress may increase as farming continues to get more technical and less physical.



Farmers Ranked 15 Out of 130 in Stress Survey

Van Horn, who attended Ag Progress Day at Penn State recently, remarked on the changes in farming.

"Farming has undergone rapid changes," Van Horn remarked. "There are so many computer today, 10 years ago, you saw nothing."

Just as the changes in farming itself causes stress, so do the changes in season.

"When situations change, that's when stress occurs," Van Horn explained. "Stress will vary from season to season."

Van Horn cited two times during the year when stress becomes more apparent: harvest time and winter.

The long, tedious hours of harvesting can be stressful, and farmers may not get enough food, rest and recreation needed for general care of the body.

"This can be a very stressful period," Van Horn said. "A lot of energy is going into that (harvesting) because it is something that has to be done."

Rev. Powl explained another stressful aspect of farming.

"They (the farmers) keep their ears to the ground as far as the weather is concerned," he said, adding that farmers are constantly worried about the weather. They hope for rain, then they have to hpe that they don't get too much rain and vice versa.

Winter, Van Horn explained, is tough because of the isolation experienced in rural communities. Also, the winter weather often throws barriers in the path of getting a job done.

The effects of stress on the farmer can be minimal or extreme, depending on how the individual handles it.

Dr. Herr explained some of the effects are: loss of sleep or appetite, inability to concentrate, loss of sense of humor, indigestion, chest pains or sweating.

Van Horn elaborated on how stress can cause fatigue and what results from that too-tired feeling. According to Van Horn, studies show that as the working day lengthens, the accuracy rate decreases in greater proportion than the increase in hours worked.

Van Horn went on to say that farmers work with "dangerous pieces of equipment," and, according to him, when farmers get tired, they are less cautious, less alert and they may try to cut a corner here and there. All of which could result in serious farming accidents.

The effects of stress are by no means limited to the individual, however. They reverbate down through the family on two levels. The first is serious, but not critical. The second is critical and potentially dangerous.

"Stress can increase conflict between husband and wife or parent and child," Van Horn explained.

This is a first level effect. Van Horn advised watching the number of rules and restrictions placed on children.

"That's a good barometer," Van Horn explained. "To limit the number of times we have to be tolerant, we create a rule."

Dr. Herr also commented on the effects.

"Both the wife and children suffer because you just can't be as good of a person when you are overburdened with stress," he said.

"Fathering things don't get done," Dr. Herr added. "It runs the gamut from a bad day to a battered wife or children."

This is where the second level effects hit the family. Van Horn described it as "the real gory stuff," such as child or spouse abuse, alcohol abuse or drug dependency. Stress in the family can be seen in children with a drug dependency or those that are runaways.

With all these negative aspects in mind, it is important to remember, according to Van Horn, that a small amount of stress, handled properly, does not always have to be a drawback, and even when it does become negative, there are ways of dealing with it.

Rev. Powl spoke of what he calls the "farmer's philosophy."

"Farmers have a unique philosophy," he said. "They take things as the come. Faith seems to be their capsule answer."

But sometimes other things are needed to supplement the faith.

"Get a change of pace - exercise or hobbies," Dr. Herr said. "Or get help at making decisions about things that are not going well."

"People try to do this farming thing without enough help," he said. "Hire another man or buy another piece of machinery."

Van Horn recommended basics to combat stress. Get enough sleep and eat properly, he recommended.

Farms: Are they always as serene as they appear?

Stress Tough on Young Farmer

BY KIMBERLY HERR

LANCASTER — At age 19, Allen Edwards had his own dairy herd and his own farm and was active in many farming organizations.

At age 29, Allen has learned to slow down.

"I couldn't sleep, and I couldn't eat," Allen explained. "I couldn't work very good, and I was always chewing peoples' heads off for no reason."

Stress hit Allen the hardest two years ago when he said he was in the "worse financial shape I had ever been in."

Adding to this was the peer pressure he felt from having a father and two brothers, all successful farmers. In addition, he was rushing in from a day's work only to grab a bite to eat and dash off to a meeting or banquet of one of his many farming organizations.

"I got to the point where enough was enough for the day," Allen said. "One thing I have stopped doing is attending farm-related banquets and meetings.

While Allen recognized the symptoms of too much stress and managed to cut some of the pressure out of his life, he has by no means cleared all the stress from his life.

"The methods of farming change so much," said Allen, who raises 92 cows on his 143-acre farm in Blair County. "This kind of works on a person too."

"The mental stress is a lot more tremendous than the physical stress," he explained.

In order to relieve some of the pressure, Allen plays softball during the summer and jogs and lifts weights during the winter. He strongly recommends that farmers get involved in something that has nothing to do with farming.

Allen Edwards and his dog, Chugg, take a break at Allen's Blair County dairy farm.

Allen explained other ways in which he managed his most stressful period.

"You have to be talking to people about it," Allen said, adding that it works whether you talk to friends or professionals.

Allen, who is single, explained that having a wife and a family to share problems with would be a comfort, but then there would also be more people to support.

Allen said keeping his farm is a "50-50 thing" right now, but he has no intentions of giving up. He is looking toward the future.

"Farming does offer long-range security for those who can stay with it," Allen said.

Champions Picked at Sheep Show

NORRISTOWN — The Green Pastures 4-H Sheep Club held their annual show during the recent Montgomery County 4-H Fair.

Within the separate breed classes, the Hampshire ram lamb of John Stewart, Collegeville, was selected for a Champion ribbon and Ahna Landin, Lansdale, received a Reserve Champion award for her aged ewe.

Steve Pierson received a Champion ribbon with his Suffolk ewe lamb. The Reserve Champion was a yearling Suffolk ewe owned by Joshua Landis, Perkiomenville.

In the Dorset breed, the yearling ewe shown by Phil McMahon took Champion, while Mark Shellenberger, Lansdale, received a Reserve Champion for his ewe lamb.

Store Grains, Seeds Properly

LANCASTER — Every smart shopper realizes that when buying food, wholesomeness — lack of foreign materials and absence of mold — is of primary importance. However, says A. Joan Lamberson, Extension home economist, millions of dollars spent on grains, edible seeds and processed foods are lost each year because proper home storage techniques have been overlooked. After you obtain a high quality product, preserve its nutrition and palatability by considering the following points before you place it on the shelf.

—ROTATION: A "first in/first out" rotation system reduces the chance for insect, rodent, or chemical spoilage.

—AIR: Most foods contain some fat. Fat oxidizes when in contact with air, producing rancid odors and flavors. As a result, the nutritional value decreases, and the product may become slightly toxic. To slow the development of rancidity, fill storage containers, make them as airtight as possible and store them in a dark, cool place.

—LIGHT: Sunlight bleaches food stored in clear packages, destroying the food's pigments, flavor, and texture. It can also cause vitamins to lose their activity. Never store foods packaged in clear containers in a sunlit area, even if the sunlight hits them for only a few minutes a day.

—HEAT: Heat speeds up chemical reactions that destroy color, flavor, texture, and nutritional value in store foods. Shady, indoor, or underground storage reduces heat influence. Refrigeration is one of the easiest and best methods of food preservation.

—MOISTURE: A certain amount of moisture helps maintain the quality of many foods, but an increase in moisture facilitates insect, mold and bacteria growth in packaged foods. A dry storage place and proper packaging will keep the right amount of moisture in and excess moisture out.

—STORAGE CONTAINERS: The best containers are made of glass, metal or rigid plastic. Containers should retain natural moisture and food colors while keeping out insects, rodents, mold, dust, air, and light. Avoid wooden or paper containers where moisture is a problem. Use metal containers only in dry areas and store glass containers where they will be safe from breakage. Also remember that rodents and insects can penetrate wood, cardboard, and thin plastic.

Occupational Hazard

"Take a break," he said. "Many farmers will not take a break. They will start early in the morning and work until they drop."

Van Horn suggested that farmers take a nutritious snack into the field with them. This will provide both energy and relaxation when the farmer takes a short break for the snack.

Van Horn also had some tips for relaxing before trying to go to sleep.

"Slow down a little bit - prepare to go to sleep - do something calming or enjoyable," he said.

Van Horn also put great emphasis on the ability to pull strength from the family.

"The number one remedy for the effects of stress is to get the family together and do something as a family," he said. "Build up resources ahead of time to deal with the stress that will come later."

Our rock phosphate is very economical priced. Only $110 per ton plus spreading because it comes bulk direct from mines without blending costs. Many happy customers. 27.7% protein haylage. Vegetables sweeter than the neighbor's because of more nutrition. Big double crop, both without fertilizer, but had our rock phosphate 2 years before. 200 bu. corn per acre in dry 1980. Our program holds the moisture because of looser soil and subsoil from live earthworms and microorganisms which do more than dead ones killed by chemicals. Extremely low vet. bills because of better feed grown. Much more could be said but the above should convince anyone that obeying natural laws pays big dividends. Ask for literature.

All our products do best applied in the fall to condition the soil and decompose the organic matter. This is the reason our customers get such huge crops.

4-H, FFA'ers compete for York steer honors

BY LAURA ENGLAND

YORK — The top two 4-H steers at the York Fair each recorded a 310 pound weight gain since May 30, but John Eaton's heavyweight champion edged out its medium lightweight competitor for the grand champion title.

Weighing in at 1155 pounds, Eaton's Hereford-Angus-Chianina cross was named both the champion heavyweight and overall grand champion. Eaton, Windsor, bought his blue-ribbon winner from Donald Walter, Airville.

Capturing the reserve grand champion honors was Jamie Kohr, York, and her 1020 pound Hereford-Angus-Chianina cross. The steer was the champion mediumweight winner.

Class champion honors also went to Nancy Townsend, Brodbecks, champion lightweight, and Doug Caldwell, Windsor, reserve champion lightweight. The reserve mediumweight title went to Joe Druck, York.

Kerri Kohr, York, showed the champion light heavyweight while Allen Werner, Hanover, had the reserve champion light heavyweight. Joann Rishel, Glen Rock, won the reserve champion heavyweight honors.

In the 4-H Beef Breeding Show, representatives from the Angus, Charolais, Chianina, Hereford and Simmental breeds paraded around the show ring to compete for individual awards.

Topping the Angus competition was Cathy Shive, Seven Valleys, and her April 1982 heifer. Gail Rishel, Glen Rock, earned the reserve champion honors with her February 1982 heifer.

Champion Charolais honors went to John Eaton and the reserve champion title went to John Myers.

J.P. Hausner showed the champion Hereford while Bob Livingston had the reserve champion.

In Chianina competition, sisters Kerri and Jamie Kohr walked off with the champion titles. Kerri had the grand champion, and Jamie the reserve. Jamie also received champion Simmental honors. Jimmy Townsend showed the reserve Simmental female.

Following the breed competitions, the 4-H'ers put out their all in a showmanship contest. The winners by age category were:

Ages 8-10 — 1. Mary Godfrey; 2. Gail Rishel; 3. Darby Smith.

School Phobia

MEDIA — School phobia - literally a fear of school - is real for an alarming number of children. According to Maryetta Dorricott, Delaware County Extension home economist, school phobia can be a problem for junior high school and even senior high school children, and it's a problem which is often ignored. Our traditional view of school phobia is one of very young children afraid to go off to first or second grade because they want to stay safe at home with Mommy. This view is too simple. A fear of school can be much more complex than simple separation and can effect children of all ages.

Older children, may be already under stress because of difficulties at home such as divorce, custody confusion, a family illness or death, and financial insecurity because of unemployment, layoffs, or just plain poverty. They find they cannot cope with the new learning situations and changing social scene that many face in school.

Our system of education is based on change - students change classes, teachers, and even school from one year to the next. Older children are also in the midst of complex physical and physiological changes as they go through adolescence. If there are too many changes at home as well, fear and stress can take over. These can lead to debilitating physical problems that interfere with a student's ability to learn or even to go to school. The symptoms of school phobia resemble other fear and stress problems. They can include a rapid pulse, sweaty palms, upset stomach, headaches, light headedness, and usually, an overwhelming desire to stay at home. There is no simple tonic to cure such phobia.

If your doctor and you are satisfied your child has no health problems and these symptoms persist, then you might suspect school phobia. You, your child, your child's teachers, counselors, and doctor will need to work together. Here are a few guidelines to help you ease your child away from fear.

—Be understanding and listen. Don't just assume your child is faking illness to stay at home. The illness may be very real and you need to know the problem before you act.

—Changing family routines can sometimes help. Arrange to take you child to school yourself or be there when school is over. You may be able to ease the pressure if these periods of unstructured time are a problem.

—Try starting the day a little earlier so you can all begin in a more calm, collected, and organized atmosphere.

—Arrange to spend time together after school to share events of the day. Often just having a chance to talk in an unpressured and private atmosphere about school difficulties helps reduce their menace.

—Develop some positive incentives for going to school and keep them school-related. You want to reinforce something about school your child likes. Do not confuse an incentive with a bribe.

—Be firm about the need to go to school. All children must go to school. You went to school, the children in the neighborhood go to school, and your child must learn to cope with school, too. Don't allow staying home to become a habit. But forcing school attendance without understanding, and without recognizing the problem, can make the fear of school worse.

—Be sure to talk to your child's guidance counselor or teacher. They may not be aware of any problems, but once alerted can usually help you and your child identify problem areas and ways to reduce the fear.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We've had visitors. I don't mean the kind that stop in and then leave shortly like our son, the college professor from Maine, who surprised us with an overnight visit on his way home from a National Agronomy meeting in Washington, D.C. These were visitors that stayed a week.

Our daughter, Nancy, and her family came for a week from Seattle, Washington. Their three year old son, David, is a loud and constant talker. So some of my first words to him were "You are a little hoarse." He immediately asked me why I had called him a "horse." He doesn't miss anything and is full of "whys."

Every night found him and his mother in the milk parlor or feeding the calves in the hutches. He enjoyed the small ride that his Grandpa gave him on the big tractor too. He told us that when the animals stopped saying "baaa" and said "mooo" then they were big enough to give us milk. David really kept his mother busy watching all of his activities.

Nancy and I visited several craft shops. And as she said, "After you've seen three or four, you've pretty much seen all of them." We managed to take a few hours for a picnic and some boating and fishing at Speedwell Lake north of Lititz. David used the net to catch imaginary fish, and we fished in vain, but it was a beautiful day.

They have now gone to New York state to visit the other set of grandparents, and I'm left with my baskets of tomatoes and cucumbers. This year the sweet corn ears are rather small, but I've managed to freeze enough for us.

Efficient dependable operation.
1 Vacuum pulls grain into the system
2 Gravity separation in the cyclone allows grain to pass through the 3 airlock and into the 4 pressurized airstream which pushes it to its destination

Compare the cost effectiveness of a vac-u-vator before spending money to repair or extend your present auger or belt conveyor system

Pneumatic conveyors are used by all major seaports around the world to discharge and transfer shiploads of grain. The reason is pneumatic conveyors have proven to be most cost effective way to move grain. Most grain farmers and grain transfer storage companies think of Vac U Vators as being a versatile practical supplement to their existing mechanical conveying systems ... and they are. However Vac U Vators are also a highly cost effective alternative to mechanical conveyor systems. So instead of investing money to repair replace or extend your present bucket belt or auger system we suggest you consider starting to switch over to a modern efficient Vac U-Vator pneumatic conveying system

What Has Happened to Junipers?

LANCASTER — Junipers, as with any other plant, can have certain problems. However, over the last several months, a far greater number of established juniper plantings have developed dieback. From overall appearance, dead branches are randomly scattered throughout the plant and/or entire grouping of plants, and is not localized.

The first and foremost possibility is Phomopsis Twig Blight, especially where susceptible species and varieties are growing. This disease appears to be more troublesome during wet and cloudy periods — conditions that have certainly been the case this spring. When the typical dead brown branch tips become sufficiently numerous, the appearance of the plants or the entire planting bed is very dramatically affected.

Although there is a recommended control, frequency and cost of application nearly eliminate it from possibility. A better approach when one is starting anew is to select varieties that are resistant. One that should be especially avoided is the Andorra juniper. Although it continues to be routinely planted, it is one of the most susceptible varieties.

Another shocking development this year with low growing (those greater than four inches, but less than 12 inches tall) junipers when planted en masse is branch dieback caused by rodents. With little snow cover as a protecton this winter, such plantings provided marvelous living quarters for rodents. While there they girdled many of the main stems near the crown of each plant. This chewing was done very haphazardly and generally appears scattered throughout the bed.

In other cases, there appears to be a gradual browning or yellowing of old growth, or scattered dead areas on new twigs. These symptoms can arise at any time of the year. The latter occurs on newly planted shrubs that have been located in wet or poorly-aerated soils. The former indicated advanced root deterioration on established junipers; also from poor drainage.

Several years after planting, junipers may gradually lose their lush, thick habit of growth and seem to thin out, although they may not die entirely. Even though we constantly preach juniper requirements, people (both professional and knowledgeable homeowner), don't seem to learn. To thrive, junipers must have plenty of sunlight and a well-aerated, well-drained soil.

When the weather warms up and dries, spider mites may become a curse on junipers. Stippled needles are not apparent initially, but when the infestation gets heavy and control is more difficult, the overall appearance becomes an obvious dusty or greyish green. Since the individual bugs are now visible to the naked eye, one would need a hand lens or magnifying glass to see them and determine how great the problem is. Although the labels on certain commonly used insecticides state that they control spider mites, the use of a recommended mitecide such ad Kelthane is a more effective choice.

Prepare Food Safely

LANCASTER — Has anyone in your family ever gotton sick or "had problems" from something you prepared for a meal? Food-related illnesses are largely a result of carelessness or lack of knowledge about proper food preparation and storage, says Gerald D. Kuhn, professor of food science Extension at Penn State. The preparer must take precautions to insure safety. Here's some advice from Kuhn:

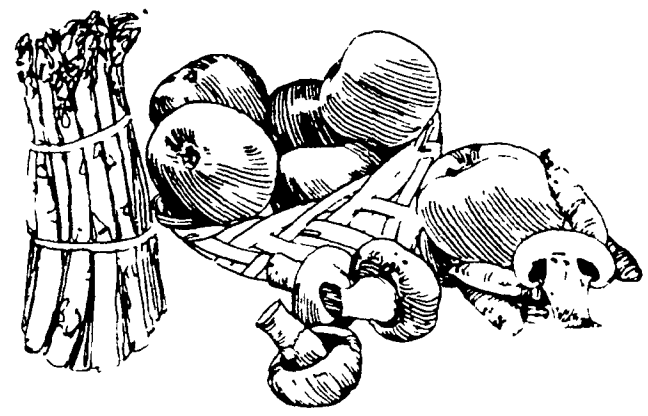
— Potential health problems are related to the handling of raw meat, especially poultry. Take care not to handle raw meat in conjunction with other foods, because this could cross-contaminate them. Also, make sure that unprotected cuts on hands and fingers do not come in contact with raw meat. The cut could become a source of staphylococcal contamination in meat.

— In spite of popular belief and frequent energy saving tips, leftovers including cooked meat should not be left out to cool before storing in the refrigerator. Food left at room temperature for a long time provides a great environment for bacterial growth. Cool hot foods quickly by setting the container in ice water before refrigerating.

— Leftover meat and stuffing should be stored separately. When stored together, stuffing may become contaminated by bacteria growing on the surface of the meat. Besides stuffing, other foods that support the growth of dangerous bacteria include puddings; custard pies; salads made of meat, eggs, or vegetables; cheese pies or quiches; meat pies; pizzas and lasagna.

— A food preparer should also know that refrigeration does not stop the growth of bacteria in foods and that freezing does not kill them. Refrigerator temperatures of 40°F or lower will slow the growth of bacteria, but not stop it. Temperatures above 40°F will aid the growth of bacteria.

Canned foods that have rust on the can, are bulging, or don't appear to be normal are good candidates for unsafe food. If a can is opened, do not taste the food to see if it is safe to eat. Test it by checking its appearance and smell.



Watch for Danger Signs in Food

LANCASTER — Have you ever opened a jar of home-canned green beans for dinner and suddenly noticed that the liquid in the jar is "milky?" Are the green beans safe to eat? What should you do with them if they aren't?

Nancy Stevens, Extension home economist, says if you watch for the danger signs in home-canned foods, you can prevent a serious form of food poisoning—botulism

Cloudy liquid in the jar is one sign of danger. The cloudiness could be caused by other things besides food poisoning bacteria, but don't take a chance. Throw the food out.

If the jar is cracked, has a loose lid or a lid that bulges on top, food poisoning bacteria could also be present. Throw the jar out.

When disposing of contaminated canned goods, wrap the cans or jars in plastic and then place them in a heavy paper bag Put the bag in a closed garbage can where children and animals cannot get at it, then wash your hands. You could be dealing with botulism which is dangerous if you get even a small amount in your mouth.

To protect against possible unseen contamination before serving homecanned foods, bring all home-canned meat, poultry and vegetables to a rolling boil and simmer for 10 minutes before tasting for quality and seasoning. Heating brings out spoilage odors and can warn you of possible food poisoning before you taste it.

If the food smells bad, is foaming or looks strange, don't take chances. Throw it out. Never, never taste it.

Be cautious with your home-canned foods and you can avoid nasty problems with food poisoning and botulism.

"We're looking for farmers who want to be good managers and make all their efforts pay off." Ron Feister, VP Agri-Loan Department

"In the Agri-Loan Department of Commonwealth National Bank farming is our business, just like it's yours. Our specialized lending group is agriculturally trained and experienced. We don't just know about farming, we've lived it, and our job is to help farmers like you make the most of your resources. So we have an entire support staff of experts who can analyze your financial data and give us the back-up information we need to help you.

4th Largest in Northeast

"Commonwealth National's Agri-Loan Department is the fourth largest in the Northeast, with $74 million committed to agriculture. But we do more than just lend you money. Our officers are available to assist farmers in solving specific problems and promoting their businesses. We're people who can look at your business objectively and recognize opportunities you may miss because you're so close to it. And we've got information on everything from the most efficient way to buy agrichemicals to where new markets are opening up.

The Personal Approach

"Every farm and every farmer is different, so our lending officers analyze each situation separately. We'll drive out to your farm, take a look at your operation and talk to you about your particular needs. We want to help you make decisions that will increase your profit.

Promoting Pennsylvania Products

"In addition to working with farmers individually, Commonwealth National recognizes the importance of promoting Pennsylvania farm products. For a number of years, we've done annual promotions focusing on one product. In 1981, it was eggs; in 1982, dairy; in 1983, pork. We plan to continue our efforts in this direction for years to come.

Real opportunity

"We see the potential for real growth, real opportunity in farming. And our Agri-Loan staff is keeping abreast of all the new developments, so that as farming becomes more sophisticated, we can give you the financial advice you need to grow and maintain a high level of efficiency.

"If you'd like us to assist you, call us at 717-295-3381 and ask for an Agri-Loan officer."

Outstanding 4-H'ers Selected

NORRISTOWN — The selection of the Montgomery County 4-H 1983 Boy and Girl was made on the basis of past participation in club, county, state-wide events, leadership roles and on their Blue Form entry.

Debbie Fagley has been an active member of the Trappe 4-H Club for nine years. At 17, she is an experienced teen leader, having held many leadership positions on the club, county and regional level. She has taught sewing for the past few years to beginning members in her club and has made them realize the value of making and creating their own garments. This summer she organized and coordinated the puppeteering project at the Lansdale Club, supervising four other teen leaders who assisted her in teaching kids how to make marionettes. At 4-H Camp Shehaqua, Debbie turned crafts and finger puppets into an exciting activity for boys and girls.

Debbie is a 4-H ambassador. She organized a slide set and talk about "4-H Opportunities" and has taken it to many 4-H clubs to encourage members to take advantage of 4-H programs.

In July of 1983, Debbie was a delegate to the National Citizenship Washington Focus Program, in Washington, D.C., where she saw the U.S. Government in action and communicated with other 4-H teens, sharing ideas and problems concerning youth today.

Debbie is also an active member of the Furry Friends Rabbit & Cavy Club, Exchange Club and the Teen Council. This year she was selected as a national 4-H winner in the Clothing & Textile Program and will represent Pennsylvania at National 4-H Congress in Chicago in November.

Debbie is the daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Kenneth Fagley, Trappe.

Jerry Longworth has been an active 4-H member for eight years. President of the Hatfield Horseshoes 4-H Club, he has also been a strong Teen Leader, organizing the club and demonstrating horse grooming and showmanship skills to younger members. Voted Outstanding 4-H Equine Member for 1982, Jerry has been taking both horse performance & production projects. He has also been a member of the horse judging team at State 4-H Achievement Days.

As a 4-H summer club leader Jerry, improved his leadership skills teaching the "Horseless" project to youth ages 8-12 in Lansdale.

Jerry, too, has been a Teen Ambassador. Jerry has also participated in Capital Days and Citizenship Washington Focus and most recently PAFC in Shippensburg.

Aside from horse projects, Jerry took part in the 4-H veterinary science program and was recognized for his efforts when he was awarded a county medal for vet science.

Jerry plans to attend Rutgers University, majoring in animal science. His parents are Mr. & Mrs. G. R. Longworth, Lansdale.

How-to Ag Export Seminar scheduled

SUMMERDALE — Food and agriculture's role in export marketing will be discussed during a seminar sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture in the Department's regional office in Summerdale Sept. 22.

State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell said the second in a series of seven workshops, coordinated through the new Export Development Division of the Bureau of Agricultural Development, is designed to focus attention on the increasing importance of exporting the state's agricultural products. "Expansion of Pennsylvania's share of the agricultural export trade market is a priority for the 1980's," Hallowell said. "This seminar and other efforts will concentrate on making information available to Pennsylvania firms to help them establish a strong marketing program.

"Pennsylvania firms exported more than $560 million in farm and food products in 1982," said Hallowell. "This is a good record, but much more can be done to assist our exporting firms and those wishing to enter the business."

Gretchen Anderson, chief of the Department's Export Development Division will open the session with a discussion of state provided services, export directories, trade leads and AGNET, a computer network which can provide daily information on trade possibilities around the world.

Debra Henke, representative with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agriculture Service, will discuss the role of international food shows and "How They Can Help You Get Started in Export." A film entitled "How Not To Exhibit Yourself" will accompany the presentation.

Following a short break, Dwight Summers, president of Charles G. Summers, Inc., New Freedom, Will discuss "Keys To Success." Summers and his firm have been active in exporting canned vegetables since 1974. The company has exported over $1 million since 1979 to countries such as Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Quatar, Liberia and the Bahamas. He was the winner of the first Governor's "E" Award in 1981.

Further information on this seminar or export marketing of agricultural products is available by Writing Ms. Gretchen Anderson, Export Development Division, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110; or calling (717) 783-8460.

The Surge Infarmation System. A feed and management system so advanced that all others seem outdated.

But don't take our word for it. Make your own comparison.

Compare the overall potential of Infarmation to help you track your cows, manage your dairy, and handle the future demands you'll put on your system. There simply is no comparison.

Compare Infarmation's feeding capabilities. With most other systems, you need to manually adjust the amount of feed periodically, so cows are always being overfed or underfed. The Infarmation Feed Manager, on the other hand, automatically adjusts the ration each day of each cow's lactation cycle. This is more than a convenience. It's much more precise feeding, and makes a big difference in efficiency, milk production and even herd health.

Finally, compare service. We doubt if you'll find another system with a toll-free Help Line, a computer club and certified dealer service right on the farm.

Broiler Housing Seminar to meet Oct. 12 in Salisbury

NEWARK, Del. — The 1983 National Broiler Housing Seminar will be held Wednesday, October 12, in the Midway Room of the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center in Salisbury, Maryland. Registration will begin at 8 a.m. and the meeting will adjourn at 3:15 p.m.

According to University of Delaware extension poultry specialist George Chaloupka, this year's program will include a number of topics of direct interest to growers, as well as company representatives and management personnel.

During the morning session there will be presentations on safety and health, pest control and poultry farms, financing broiler house construction, an update of current tax laws, and a panel discussion on brooding paper and whether it works. In the afternoon, there will be talks on ceiling fan evaluation, use of off-peak electricity for brooding, and the effectiveness of heat exchangers. The meeting will close with a discussion by local industry representatives of two on-farm problem areas — live haul and feed delivery.

Because of the new location, for the first time in the 22-year history of the seminar there will be room for exhibits. Planners are now contacting equipment dealers, building contractors, loan agencies and others who may be interested in putting up displays. Cost of exhibit space is $15 per 6-foot table. All arrangements must be made in advance.

The seminar is sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service of the universities of Delaware and Maryland, and Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc.

Those interested in attending are encouraged to register by October 5. There is a $15 fee to cover lunch, a copy of the proceedings and other costs. To register, call or write: George Chaloupka, R.D. 2, Box 48, Georgetown, DE 19947 (302-856-5250).

USDA issues special provisions for haying

CHICAGO, Ill. — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block on September 2 said the U.S. Department of Agriculture will issue special provisions which will allow producers in severly drought-affected counties to harvest hay and forage from their own conservation use acreage for their own livestock.

Block said these provisions will be in effect immediately for the nearly 1,000 counmties already approved for grazing.

"Restricting use of harvested hay and forage to the individual farmer's own livestock minimizes the adverse economic impact on commercial hay producers," Block said. "At the same time, it will provide some relief to livestock producers who are taking part in this year's acreage reduction and payment-in-kind programs."

Block said approval for additional counties for special haying and grazing will be on a county-by-county basis.

Indiana 'computerizes' jr. livestock sale

BY DONNA McCONAUGHEY

INDIANA — Computers have entered many areas of the agriculture industry but Indiana County has the distinction of being the first county to utilize computers in record-keeping for their Junior Livestock Sale.

Indiana County was the first to include a carcass show in their county 4-H livestock program so it was no surprise to see them being first when it came to using computers in this area.

The true genius behind this endeavor was Roger Lippert, of Marion Center. A computer programmer at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, Lippert graduated recently from IUP with a major in accounting and a minor in computer science.

The Indiana County Junior Livestock Sale Committee was aware of a program that was used during the Junior Livestock Sale at Farm Show for record-keeping purposes with the TI 59. However, in reviewing the program Lippert found a major fault in the fact that if a mistake is made one must start over again at the beginning of the information being typed in.

Just four days before the Indiana County Sale, Lippert began writing a new program. His wife, the former Linda Martin, provided much information necessary in setting up the program from her many years of experience in showing hogs in Indiana County. After approximately fifteen hours of work, Roger was ready for a "trial run.

The night before the actual sale Lippert's wife, Linda tried the program using last sale results. The program, written in BASIC, passed with flying colors and was ready for the real test.

The evening of the Indiana County Junior Livestock Sale Roger and Linda Lippert moved their equipment into an empty hog pen of the sale barn in preparation for the sale. In a matter of only minutes, a crowd had gathered around the pen as parents, 4-H'ers, and businessmen alike gathered to see this new application for computers. Using his own Atari 800 with 48K and a small TV which was loaned to the Lipperts by the DeBug Bytes Company of Indiana, Roger began providing sale information to the computer.

The results were a continuous up-to-the minute sale report. Averages and gross sale figures were available at any time during the sale.

The only difficulty of the evening was encountered when the electricity flow began fluctuating due to increased demands throughout the fairgrounds. This necessitated a move of the equipment to an exhibit building with a continuous power flow. Otherwise, this first use was a definite success.

Lippert hopes to add other features to the program, with the possibilities including printed invoices for buyers as well as sellers. Roger notes that the program is written in BASIC so that it can be adapted to almost any computer and features can be added as the needs of the sale change.

Anyone interested in contacting Roger Lippert about the program, or possible adaptation for other counties may contact him at RD #1 Box 167AA, Marion Center, PA 15759 or phone 412-397-8914.

Pa. bred bull to Select Sires

PLAIN CITY, Oh. — Select Sires, artificial insemination (A.I.) cooperative, has acquired an outstanding young Holstein bull bred by Laura Hillegass of Berlin, Pennsylvania. Based on his superior pedigree, Hillmont Chief Prescott has been chosen as one of 130 Holstein bulls from throughout the United States to enter Select Sires' Program for Genetic Advancement (PGA) sire sampling system in 1983.

The dam of this "Select" sire is Ruth-R-Le Gay Precious. She is an Excellent (90) high testing, Gay Ideal daughter with all records above 21,000M, 950F. Her best record to date is 24,604 pounds milk, 1,147 pounds butterfat and 4.7% test. The grandam is also a high producer with very consistent calving intervals and high % test. The sire of this young bull is GLENDELL Arlinda Chief, a superior sire of proven sons. This new young bull entering the PGA is a paternal half-brother to Cor-Vel ENCHANTMENT, the highest PD Dollar and highest TPI bull in the Holstein breed.

Decision-making time for '84 wheat crop

NEWARK, Del. — Area farmers will soon be planting wheat. Two things they must decide are how much acreage to plant, and how best to market their 1984 crop.

First, there's the matter of how much wheat to grow and whether or not to participate in the 1984 wheat set-aside and PIK programs, the latter of which looks less attractive than this year's program, according to University of Delaware extension crops marketing specialist Carl German.

There's also some uncertainty over what wheat prices will do during the next few months. Despite a near record 1983 wheat crop to be disposed of on top of a record carry-over from 1982, the price of wheat has rallied recently along with corn and soybean prices in response to this summer's widespread drought.

Calling the potential benefits of the 1984 wheat PIK program "less than desirable," German says in most cases it probably will pay farmers to participate only in the Acreage Reduction Program or grow a full crop. Under the circumstances he and other market observers are projecting a sharp increase in '84 wheat production. This could pose some pricing problems for producers later on, but short-run prospects look good.

"With the potential for another large wheat crop on top of existing large supplies, prices could well drop later—something farmers need to be aware of," German says.

"In view of this, it would be a good idea to take advantage of present forward pricing opportunities to sell or forward contract 20 to 25 percent of your anticipated production, if you can sell winter wheat for $3.50 a bushel or better over the next few weeks. It also might pay to sell some 1983 wheat if you still have some in storage." (As of this writing, December '83 wheat prices are running around $4.06 a bushel.)

Even with favorable prices, German cautions growers not to commit more unplanted wheat than they can deliver with some degree of certainty. "Be careful not to forward price more than half the crop until after you're sure it's been made," he advises.

Uncertain weather is one of the factors affecting current wheat futures. With the country's grain belt still in the grips of searing temperatures and drought, there has been considerable concern over how this might affect new crop wheat, which should soon be going into the ground. Normally midwestern wheat is planted about the middle of September, right after soybean harvest.

Because the market could change quickly, the specialist advises farmers to follow the commodity situation closely and take advantage of current pricing opportunities for both 1983 and 1984 production.

Planter fertilizer bulletin offered

NEWARK, Del. — A bulletin designed to help farmers make more effective use of planter fertilizer when growing field corn has just been published by the University of Delaware Cooperative Extension Service.

The attractive eight-page booklet was written by extension agronomist Dr. William H. Mitchell and is based on information collected during research and extension work at the university.

The publication, which was funded in part by grants from Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. and the Delaware State Grange, contains yield comparisons for corn of different hybrid maturity groups grown with and without planter fertilizer. It shows how soil pH patterns are affected by different planter fertilizers depending on placement in or near the seed row. It discusses the selection of planter fertilizer for manganese deficient soils, and tells how management of planter fertilizer affects plant stands.

There are also discussions of nitrogen sources and their differences, liquid vs. dry fertilizers, safety of blended fertilizers, desirable planter fertilizer rates, use of planter fertilizer in combination with broiler manure, the effect of planter fertilizer on corn silking date, and its value in no-till corn production.

The factual, easy-to-read text is illustrated by numerous four-color graphs and charts.

Individual copies of the bulletin are available free to Delaware residents. In-state bulk copies sell for 85 cents each. Out-of-state, individual copies are available for $1, bulk copies for 85 cents. To order call the county extension office in Newark (738-2506), Dover (736-1448) or Georgetown (856-5250). Or write: Mail Room, Townsend Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, DE 19711.

Franklin conservation dinner Sept 29

CHAMBERSBURG — Paul Swartz, Director of the Bureau of Soil and Water Conservation, DER, will be the guest speaker at the Annual Banquet and Meeting of the Franklin County Conservation District. This year's banquet will be held on Sept. 29 at Kauffman's Community Center, beginning with a family style dinner at 6:45 p.m.

Swartz came to DER in June, 1982 from the Joint Legislative Conservation Committee of the Pennsylvania General Assembly. From 1974 to 1981, Paul was the Executive Director of the Dauphin County Conservation District. His tenure with that organization is significant because of the integral role which conservation districts play in the administration of the Department's Erosion and Sedimentation Control program and because of the close working relationship which exists between the Bureau of Soil and Water Conservation and conservation districts.

Highlighting the evening's activities will be the announcement of the 1983 Conservation Farmer of the Year.

Anyone desiring tickets for this year's banquet should contact the Conservation District office at 264-8074 before Sept. 21.

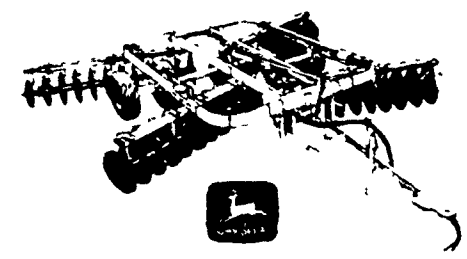
TILLAGE DISCOUNTS

John Deere discounts these new tillage tools by 5 to 10 percent and waives finance charge to March 1, 1984



Just as you're getting into the fall/spring tillage season John Deere announces a big dollar saving offer on major tillage tools. Depending on the tillage tool you buy (see the chart) your dealer will deduct 5 or 10 percent from the latest base machine price. For example: the discount on an 18½ foot 235 Disk would save you more than $1,100.

On any of these you can save even more by financing with John Deere. Finance charge will be waived to March 1, 1984, for qualified buyers.*

Machine	Discount from Suggested Retail Price
Moldboard Plows	5 percent
Chisel Plows	10 percent
Field Cultivators	10 percent
Disks	10 percent
Mulch Tillers	10 percent
Mulch Finishers	10 percent

*Availability of John Deere financing plans subject to approval of credit.
This offer may be reduced in value or withdrawn at any time.

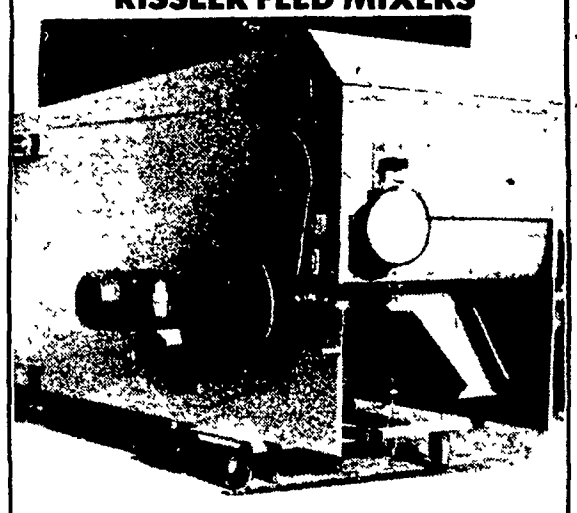
RISSLER FEED MIXERS



More and more farmers are finding that mixed rations are producing healthier and better livestock, plus better feed efficiency. Veterinarians, nutritionists consultants and feed analyst are recommending (TMR) feeding systems. Perhaps you can also increase profits by turning to this system.

This UNIQUE design was developed so farmers can have more for less. A 15,000 lb. pintle web with 2" high paddles will tumble feed from end to end. An auger with left and right flighting will bring feed to center and keep the pile crowned. This auger will mix the feed from side to side at the rate of 1200 lbs. of feed per minute and will unload when drop out is opened. Convenient crank allows flow from 0 to 1500 lbs. a minute whatever desired.

Box is coated with urethane on inside with glass like finish that is abrasion resistant. All stress points are lined with ¼" and 5/16" heavy steel. Heavy duty bearings can be relubricated and easily accessible. Takes less HP than conventional mixers.

Optional stainless steel floor. Electronic or mechanical instant-weigh scales.

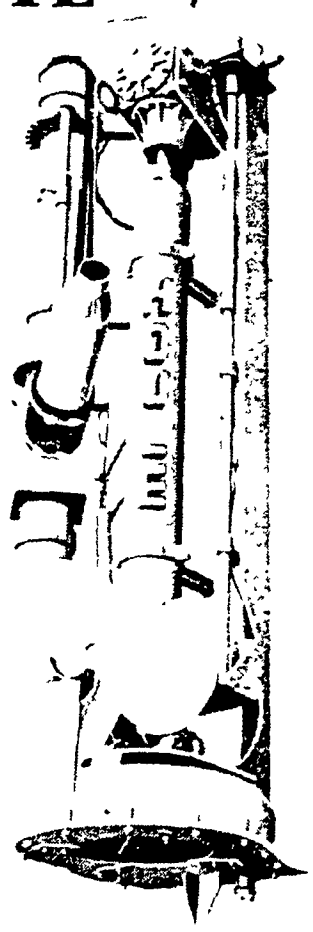
The MANURE PUMP with a BIG BITE

If you are trying to agitate and pump manure without this big propellor and positive cutting blade, you probably aren't doing it as fast as you could.



This big 24" steerable propellor agitates even the hardest of manure storage pits with heavy bedding at displacement rates of 18,000 gallons per minute. The cutting blade will chop long straw bedding and hay from feed bunks to mix it into a rich and creamy fertilizer. This pump is available for all sizes of storage areas in lagoon, trailer, 3-point hitch, and stationary models.

Don't be caught short of enough pump to do the job.

Call us today for more information or a free demonstration.

BUSINESS NEWS...

This is the Steiger 1700 Series Offset disk.

Steiger introduces disk line

FARGO, N.D. — Steiger Tractor, Inc. introduces a new line of offset disks, the 1600 and 1700 Series models.

With rugged 4" x 8" tubular steel frame, and weight per blade ranging from 150 to 176 pounds, these are some of the heaviest, most durable offset disks on the market.

These heavy disks are well-suited for primary tillage use. They chop and mix stalk trash deeply into the root zone. In addition, the disks leave residue on the surface to protect against wind and soil erosion. And because these disks pull more easily than a moldboard plow, fuel costs can be reduced substantially.

Widths of the 1600 Series Steiger disks range from 10'6" to 14'. Widths of the 1700 Series range from 15' to 20'6". Both models are available with 9" and 10" disk spacing in various widths, and disk options include 24" and 25" x 6.5 mm smooth or notched blades. Other features of the new line include an adjustable leveling screw and adjustable tongue, and a set of wrenches mounted on the frame for adjusting and tightening gangs.

Deutz - Fahr plans round baler

ATLANTA, Ga. — Deutz-Fahr GP 220 Round Balers tested in farm fields of the eastern United States and western Canada this summer "have surpassed our expectations and we plan to introduce them to the North American market next winter." So says Michael Branham, product representative, hay equipment, Agricultural Equipment Division, Deutz Corporation, Atlanta, Ga.

The firm began marketing a rectangular baler in the U.S. and Canada in 1982; but its round balers, widely used in Europe, are new to North America.

"We've tested the new round baler in everything from hay, straw and cornstalks to wilted, high-moisture hay bagged for baleage.

The Deutz-Fahr GP 220 Round Baler makes bales 4 ft. wide by 4 ft. diameter in a baling chamber equipped with 16 coated steel rollers. Bales have a soft core and an extremely tight outer wrap layer to provide maximum quality and minimum leaf loss. The baler ties automatically, reducing driver fatigue and virtually guaranteeing uniformly-shaped round bales. The first Deutz-Fahr round balers should reach dealer showrooms in the U.S. and Canada early in 1984.

Case unveils 'under 90 HP' series tractors

RACINE, WI. — J I Case has unveiled a new series of general purpose tractors in the under 90 horsepower range, featuring increased tractor/operator efficiency and productivity.

The five new tractors, designated by model numbers 1194, 1294, 1394, 1494 and 1594, with manufacturer's rated PTO horsepower of 43, 55, 65, 75, and 85 (32, 41, 48, 56 and 63 kW) have been engineered for operator comfort and convenience, as well as for increased quality, reliability and durability.

Three of the models have increased horsepower over the previous 90 Series tractors: the 1294 up two, the 1394 and 1494 up five. The new cabs on the 1394, 1494 and 1594 provide enhanced operating visibility in all directions.

Tractor controls have been improved so the operator can easily and quickly maneuver the tractor with minimal human fatigue. Low effort power steering reduces the steering effort on all models. A new remote valve with float and forward couplings allow for front-end loader operation from the remotes.

New front weight frames now utilize the same weights as used on the larger Case two-wheel drive tractors. The frames incorporate segment weights with grab handles for easy installation or removal. The front operating lights are relocated at the top of the grille to provide better operating visibility at night.

Routine engine maintenance will be simple and efficient with new tilt-up hoods to provide easy service accessibility. The Case-proven engines and drive trains, along with the heavy box-section, main-frame construction, provide rigidity which contributes to the long service life of the power train.

The Case new 94 tractor series includes, clockwise, 1194, 1294, 1394, 1494 and 1594 with PTO HP rating of 43, 55, 65, 75 and 85.

Forestry plan to debut

LEESPORT — A public hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 22 in the Berks County Agricultural Center auditorium to discuss a draft Commonwealth Forest Resources Plan. The meeting will provide residents with an opportunity to express their views on how Pennsylvania's forest resources should be managed.

The plan was prepared by the Bureau of Forestry, Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources, with assistance from the Forest Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture. Input into the plan was contributed also by members of the public, such as landowners, conservation organizations, forest industry and planning agencies.

The plan's primary purpose is to guide the Commonwealth in the use of its forest resources. The plan enables Commonwealth citizens to participate in future forest resources decisions. It also provided the Bureau of Forestry with direction in its many programs and activities pertaining to forest resources.

Divided into five main sections, the plan covers such items as planning activities, Bureau of Forestry activities, issues, alternative programs and a preferred program. Copies of the draft plan will be available at the hearing.

PRV projects move ahead

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Pilot projects to eradicate pseudorabies in swine in Pike and Macoupin Counties, Ill., and in Marshall County, Iowa, are making significant early progress, U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarians report.

Dr. L.W. Schnurrenberger, a staff veterinarian with USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said in Pike County, Ill., the cooperative state-federal-industry program appears to have eliminated pseudorabies from three previously infected herds in Detroit Township. Veterinarians are developing cleanup plans for six other infected herds that have been located to date.

"We are encouraged that these first three herds continue to remain negative after we have removed the infected animals and have twice tested the remaining swine," Schnurrenberger said.

The pilot projects in Pike and Macoupin Counties, Ill., and Marshall County, Iowa, are planned to run for three years.

"On the whole, we've made excellent progress in spite of the heat, which limits the time we have for testing swine herds," Schnurrenberger said.

Dr. James Christy, USDA veterinarian-in-charge in Illinois, said the federal-state testing crews have found a higher percentage of infected herds than expected – 25 percent. However, the incidence of infection within the herds has been lower – only about 6 percent of some 1,100 animals tested.

"We're getting excellent cooperation from swine producers all the way down the line," Christy said. "The project offers a means of eliminating the swine disease that restricts production and increases costs."

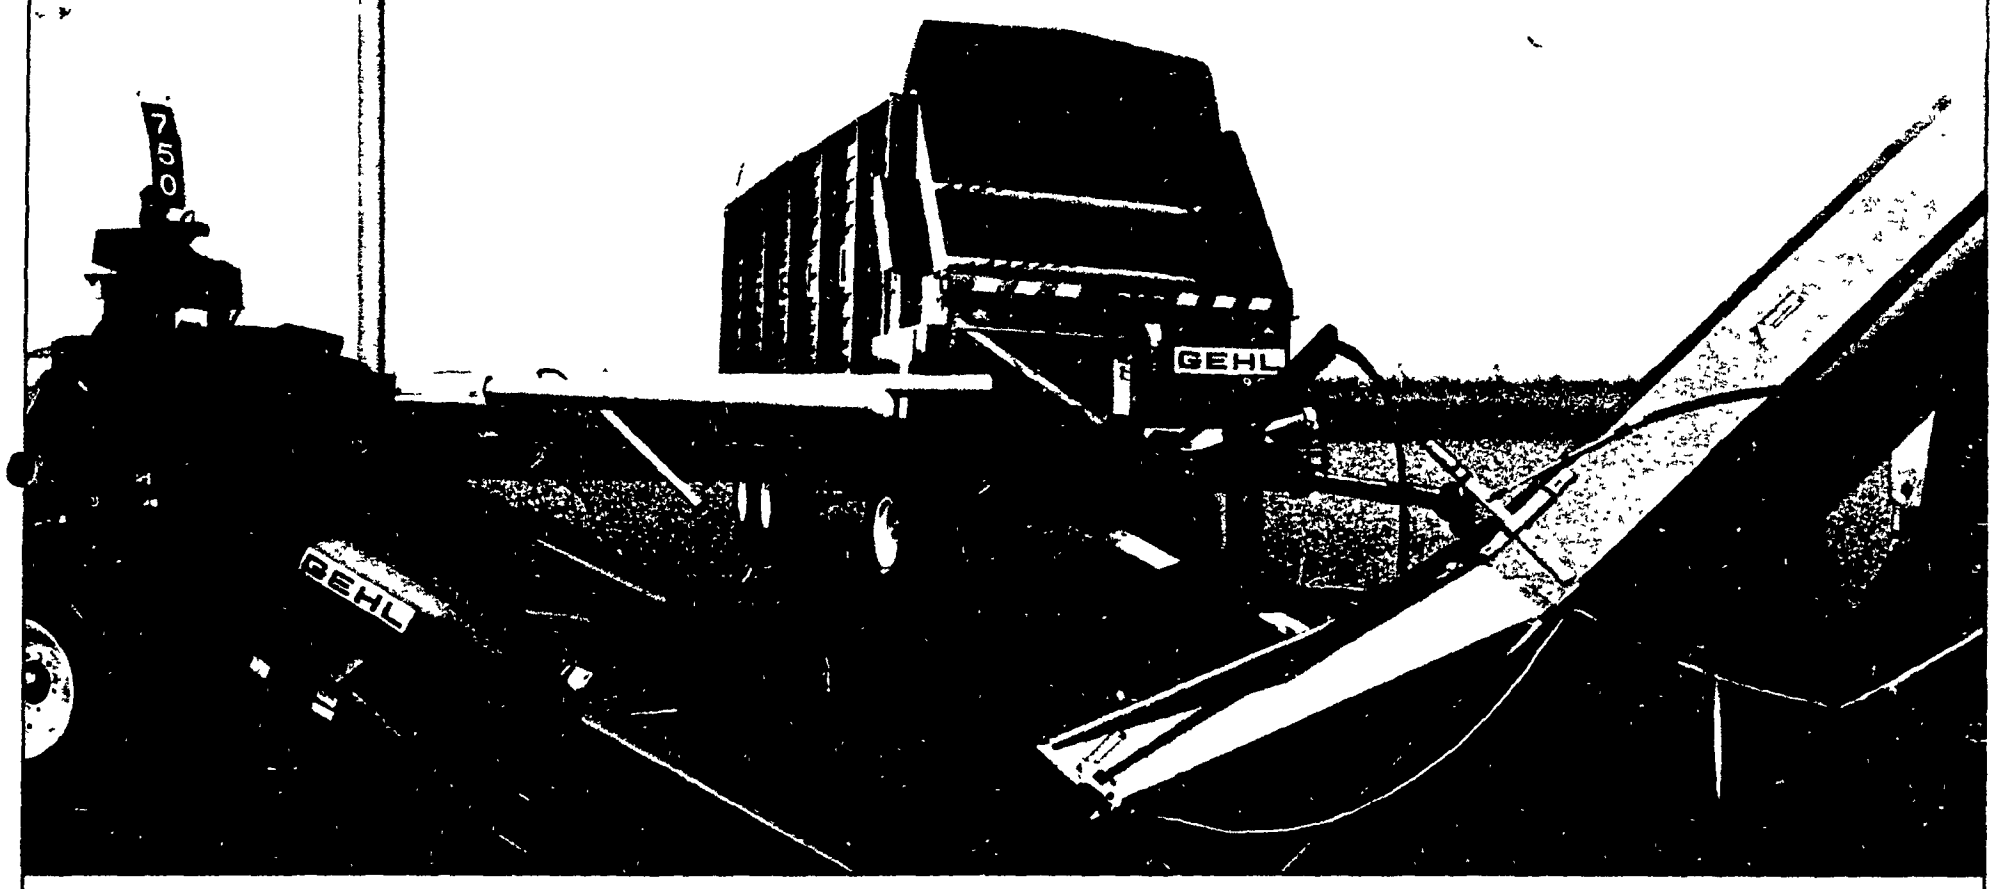
In Iowa, USDA Veterinarian-in-charge Phil Pickerill said the project has found only five infected herds out of the 57 tested since the pilot project started in early July.

"This is fewer infected herds than we originally expected," Pickerill said.

Pickerill said the veterinary practitioners in Marshall County had made "excellent" progress. The 57 herds tested represent slightly more than one-fifth of 250 herds located within the project area.

The Marshall County project differs from the one in Illinois in that vaccination is being used as a tool in developing individual cleanup plans for infected herds. As the project began later – to comply with Iowa public review procedures – it is still in the initial testing phase.

HOW TO PUT UP YOUR CORN NOW AND PUT OFF NEW EQUIPMENT PAYMENTS UNTIL APRIL 1ST, 1984.



This is the perfect time to stop in and see your Gehl dealer. He's got everything you need to put up corn silage or high moisture corn. And he's even got a way to put off paying for the equipment you need.

Delay final payment until April 1, 1984.

To get in on our new extended Delayed Payment Program, just see your participating Gehl dealer. Put 40% down, in cash or in trade.

And get a new Gehl forage harvester, flail chopper, forage box, forage blower or other eligible equipment now and delay your final payment until April 1, 1984.

The balance carries interest free until April 1, 1984.

Extra capacity, easier knife sharpening.

For the capacity you need to get your corn off on time, look at a Gehl forage harvester (capacity matched to 60-250 hp tractors).

All models feature non-stop forage flow cutting systems. And each model greatly simplifies knife sharpening thanks to the patented Gehl in-head hydraulic sharpener. Cutterbar adjustment is just as fast and easy—adjust 3-bolts from a single station.

Once your corn is cut, transport it with our durable new 960 forage box. The 960 is specially designed for rugged durability—with a beefed up mainframe and extra-strong, bolted steel supports. It'll move your corn to the silo this year, and for many years to come.

Recutter conversion at the silo.

If you're putting up high moisture corn, be sure and check out our swinging auger feeder attachment.*

It lets you easily convert a Gehl forage harvester to a recutter at the silo. It's just what you need to simplify silo filling.

Next time you visit your Gehl dealer, pick up a free copy of Gehl's brochure on the advantages of high moisture ground ear corn. (But hurry. This popular brochure is already in its second printing).

Butler cites new products

FORT ATKINSON, Wi. — Butler Manufacturing Company — Livestock Systems has introduced two new feed processing items — a series of Volume Belt elevating conveyors and conveyors with decline that can be easily converted to feeders and a Volume Belt end charge feeder, which features a 14-inch wide flexible endless belt that permits use as an end-charged conveyor and a single or divided-lot cattle feeder.

Elevating conveyors are available in lengths to 120 feet and maximum elevation of 15 degrees with standard 14 or 18 inch belts. An 18 inch textured belt allows maximum elevation of 30 degrees. Heavy gauge galvanized steel construction ensures long life and easy maintenance. Ideal for TMR systems, the conveyors deliver feed at 330 feet/minute on an endless large capacity concave trough belt. Feed can be diverted off the belt at any desired point, and the conveyor can be reversed for added flexibility. A 1, 1-½, or 2 HP electric motor powers the unit, depending on the length required.

Conveyors with decline also allow a maximum elevation of 15 degrees with the standard 14 or 18 inch belt and 30 degrees with an 18 inch textured belt. A shallow dish belt and trough design allows greater capacity and feed movement over the decline section. Heavy duty 14 gauge galvanized steel construction ensures the conveyors will withstand the elements. Needs of any application can be met with a choice of 10, 5 and 2-½ foot conveyor lengths. An optional, counter-rotating brush is available to remove fines.

The new end charge feeder, with its large capacity trough belt, carries up to 65 bu./min. of feed undisturbed at 330 ft./min. so there is no feed ingredient separation. Only a single 1 HP motor is required to operate the feeder in lengths to 60 feet, and a 1-½ HP motor to reach the unit's maximum length of 120 feet. Feeder sections are available in 10, 5, and 2-½ foot lengths and constructed of 16 gauge galvanized steel with a weather resistant zinc finish.

Options include a feeder decline infinitely adjustable to 15 degrees, galvanized steel windboards that can be used for one or both sides or combined to form a weather hood, hoppers, ceiling mounts, floor stands and customized feeder lengths. Volume Belt's easy-to-adjust feed diverter allows manual pivoting to guide feed off the desired side of the belt and into the bunk. A self-locking ratchet ensures quick and easy belt and cable tightening.

DuPont stresses ag chemicals

WILMINGTON, Del. — Service to agriculture attained independent status in the DuPont Company this month.

On September 1, DuPont created its Agricultural Chemicals Department, emerging from a recent realignment of several of the company's businesses.

"With creation of the separate Agricultural Chemicals Department, we will be able to more efficiently focus our research, marketing and manufacturing activities on a high potential area that has been important to the company for more than 55 years," said Dale E. Wolf, a DuPont vice president who heads the company's agricultural chemicals business.

The new departmental status given to the crop protection business reflects DuPont's commitment to agriculture and recognizes the rapid growth of the agricultural chemicals business, said Wolf. He noted that the number of DuPont plant scientists has more than doubled in recent years and that more than $50 million in new laboratory facilities will be completed later this year. A broad worldwide network of test farms is available to help develop and introduce new agrichemicals and new uses for existing ones. A number of new products are now undergoing intensive field review.

"Glean" and "Oust", two low toxicity herbicides that are applied at very low rates were introduced in 1982. More than 15 DuPont herbicides, fungicides and insecticides are sold in more than 125 countries. About 50 percent of DuPont agrichemicals are sold overseas.

Vicon buys new IH baler

CHESAPEAKE, Va. — Vicon, B.V., headquartered in Nieuw Vennep, Holland, has acquired the international patents and manufacturing rights from International Harvester Company for a new rectangular baler. These new generation balers were developed by International Harvester for baling either hay or straw.

Vicon will produce the new balers in Nieuw Vennep, Holland and supply them worldwide to Vicon dealers and distributors. Additionally, they will be manufactured for International Harvester for sales throughout the world except in North and South America. Manufacturing will begin in October.

Vicon developed an electronically controlled square baler for baling grass, silage, hay and straw in 1975. It has been successfully introduced in Holland, Belgium, France, Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States. The baler is listed as having a very high capacity, reducing weather risks. It simplifies transporting the bale as well as silage making and feeding.

Forage harvesting and crop cultivation equipment remain Vicon's main manufacturing and marketing thrust, said company officials. With the new baler, Vicon adds a new product to its broad range of agricultural machinery. Until this purchase was made, Vicon marketed a similar bale press built by a French manufacturer.

International Harvester officials said the move fits their own policy to concentrate on the manufacturing of tractors and combines.

Despite a turndown in the world economy, Vicon consolidated sales represented a 22 percent growth in 1982 over 1981. Almost 90 percent of Vicon's sales were outside Holland, with Europe making the largest contribution. In the U.S., despite the current farm economy, Vicon sales were up. Vicon sales worldwide exceeded 258 million dollars in 1982.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

A trust is a bit hard to define. It is something that you can use to own or control property for a specific time or purpose. Possibly the use of examples could help to define it.

A by-pass or non-marital trust is where a husband (or wife) makes a written promise that certain property that they own can be used by the wife (or husband) but not owned by that person. Furthermore they say that this property is to go to someone or something else upon the death of the person who can use the property. This type of trust only happens if the person dies. Now for the example: Frank Evers owns $50,000 worth of dairy cows. He wants his wife Jean to be able to use the cows or the money from the sale of the cows to produce income. But he also wants his son Lonnie to eventually own the cows or the money from the sale of the cows. He sets up a by-pass trust that says Jean can have the income from the cows or money as long as she lives, but upon her death the cows or money goes to Lonnie. The primary purpose is to keep the $50,000 out of Jean's estate which makes it taxable only once and also makes her estate smaller. A secondary purpose would be to make sure Lonnie eventually got the cows or money even if Jean remarried.

A revocable trust is one that is made while a person is living. It can be stopped by that person at any time or at the end of a specified time. Usually it would not be used for a farm estate plan. It's usual use is for income tax purposes.

An irrevocable trust is one that can not be stopped by the person who made it. It can be made while a person is living or after they have died (by will). The by-pass trust is one of these. Another one is a trust that may be set up after death to care for a dependent (child, parent, etc). Example: A family has a minor or handicapped child. This child will need care after the parents are gone. The parents could make a trust that would provide financial support to that child for a specified time period or for life depending on needs.

A trustee is someone who looks after the trust. They have certain duties and responsibilities. It is not a job to be given or taken lightly. The trustee is the regulator, governor, and guardian of the trust. The trustee files reports (if there are any), dispenses, or gives out money (if there is any), makes decisions on investments or sales or purchases, and listens to criticisms from trust beneficiaries. A trustee can be a person, a group of people or a bank or a combination.

Chester Grange youth honored

UNIONVILLE — Fred Suloff, membership deputy of the Pennsylvania State Grange, addressed Pomona Grange #3 of Chester-Delaware Counties at a meeting July 9 at East Lynn Grange hall in Unionville. Suloff spoke about the need to build membership in the Grange and offered suggestions for motivation. He stated that three new Granges have been organized in Pennsylvania this year.

Terry Murray, Master, presided over the business meeting which was preceded by a covered dish supper. John Felker gave the address of welcome and Carroll Pratt responded. Mr. and Mrs. Suloff and Mr. and Mrs. Merle Sieberling of Crawford County were guests.

Two Chester County youths received honors at the State Grange Youth Camp. Ellen Marie Huber of Goshen Grange and Frank Gilday of Kennett Grange served in the youth court vying for the titles of Prince and Princess of the Pennsylvania State Grange. Ellen Marie has also been selected to participate in the Grange Interstate Youth Exchange program. For the month of July, she has as her guest, Sandra Thomas from the State of Maine. Ellen Marie will spend August with the Thomas family in Maine.

It was announced that plans are progressing to build an antique farm machinery museum at Springton Manor. This is a project of the Chester County Agricultural Development Council.

Prizes for a cupcake baking contest were awarded to Mrs. J. Edwin Cook, Mrs. Carroll Pratt and Mrs. George Maule.

A skit on safety was presented by Mrs. Elwood Stinson and Mr. and Mrs. David D'Attilio of East Lynn Grange. East Lynn also received the Master's Award for best attendance at the meeting.

George Maule was elected to the Executive Committee and John Felker to the Finance Committee for three year terms.

On August 3 the annual judging of needlework, stuffed toys, vegetable and flower arrangements and baked goods will be held at Brandywine Grange hall. Miss Esther Reagan of West Chester will speak on "Your Grandmother's Doll."

A Pomona picnic is planned for September 18 at Nottingham Park. Pomona will sponsor conferral of the first four degrees at East Lynn Grange hall on September 24 and the fifth degree will be given October 8.

60 YEARS OF LEGENDARY PERFORMANCE.

Series 3 Gleaner combines: further ahead than ever.

Gleaner combines were introduced back in 1923. Ever since, they've been proving their worth...improving their advantages. Now the new Series 3 Gleaner combines—both conventional and rotary—are even further ahead in reliable, productive, cost-effective performance.

It starts with engineering, in the Gleaner tradition of innovative design. With features like the crosswise-mounted cylinder in rotary models, for efficient Natural Flow harvesting. And the unique sure-feed system on all models, that keeps crop moving smoothly without bunching. And dozens more advances that make every Gleaner combine a great performer

Throughout their 60-year history, Gleaner combines have established a solid reputation for quality. Today, that reputation is maintained through TQA, the Allis-Chalmers Total Quality Assurance program. As it's built, each Gleaner combine must pass 375 separate quality checks—including our own pre-delivery just before you take it home.

See the new Series 3 Gleaner combines, conventional and rotary. There's 60 years of legendary performance behind them. Ask for a demonstration

Farm computer seminars offered

LANCASTER — Are you interested in learning more about the use of computers and the application of computer technology to agriculture, but you have little-to-no experience with computers? If so, you might be interested in one, or both, of the seminars discussed below. Reservations are needed and will be accepted on a first-come basis.

An Introductory Farm Computer Workshop is scheduled for Saturday, October 1st in Lancaster. The main purpose of this workshop is to give farmers an opportunity to learn about computers, how they function, and about some of the equipment, programs and services that are available, plus giving farmers some "hands on" experience with computers. Interested farmers should contact the Penn state Extension Service, 1383 Arcadia Road, Room 1, Lancaster, PA 17601 (Tel. 717-394-6851) for more information and for a registration form.

A Penn State Dairy Computer Conference is also scheduled for December 14 and 15 at Penn State. This conference will focus on dairy programs and it also offers limited opportunity for some "hands on" experience. Contact your local Penn State Extension Service office for a program and registration form.

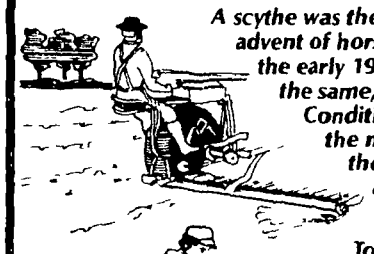
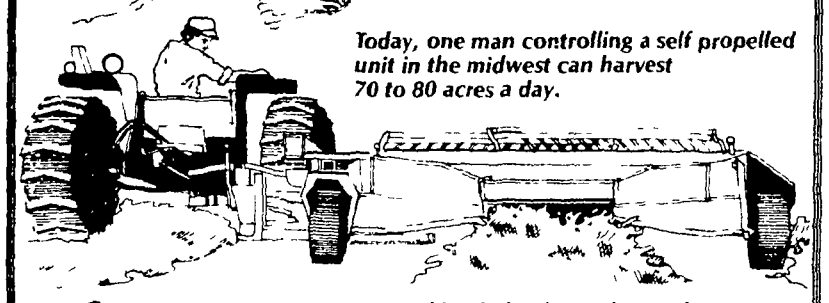
The Tools Of Farming — Mower-Conditioner
Number 12 of a Series



A scythe was the tool of choice for cutting hay until the advent of horse drawn mowers in the mid 1800's. Until the early 1950's, the mechanical principle remained the same, a sharp-toothed sickle oscillating rapidly. Conditioning of hay began in the mid 1950's and the modern mower-conditioner, invented in the mid 1960's now mows and conditions and windrows the hay in one operation.



Today, one man controlling a self propelled unit in the midwest can harvest 70 to 80 acres a day.

Since 1896 Old Guard has helped to reduce risks to the farmer as we have provided protection for his ever increasing investments.

FLEETWOOD — Sharing the spotlight with the 27 outstanding farm families of 1956 through 1982 of the Reading Fair, was the Leroy Howard family, Oley, Berks County, honored Wednesday evening at the Fleetwood Grange Hall as the Reading Fair's Outstanding Farm Family of 1983.

"It makes those long hours rewarding in the end," Howard stated as he accepted the plaque and check from Albert Boscov, President of the Agricultural and Horticultural Association of Berks County for 1983.

Boscov, also the owner of the Boscov Department stores said, "We're very proud of them," as he cited the many reasons this Fleetwood Grange family was chosen.

In addition to operating, with the help of his wife, Naomi; sons, Glenn, Kevin, and Duane; and daughters, Cindy, Karen, and Sharon, a 1000-acre dairy farm with 140 milking Holsteins averaging 17,312 pounds milk and 623 pounds fat, Howard finds time to serve as an Oley Township supervisor, Secretary of the Berks County Farmers Association, and head of the poultry department at the Oley Fair. The entire Howard family is active in their community and church and the farm chores are shared by all.

Each year the Reading Fair committee holds an annual banquet to honor the past farm families and the one recently chosen. On Wednesday evening, at the banquet, there were members present from each of the previous winning families. Honored were the previous winners who were the families of: Miles Hollenbach, 1956; Earl Rabenold, 1957; Clarence Althouse, 1958; Wayne Reading, 1959; Leon Kirkoff, 1960; Roy Christman, 1961; Norman Reifsnyder, 1962; Rueben Field, 1963; Ralph Reicherd, 1964; John Snyder, 1965; Kermit Schlegel, 1966; Luther Davis, 1967; Nicholas Kopicz, 1968; Leroy Heck, 1969; Ernest Miller, 1970; Edwood Gelsinger, 1971; Robert Sattazahn, 1972; Willard Dietrich, 1973; James Adams, 1974; Ferral Triffler, 1975; Robert Keiffer, 1976; William Stitzel, 1977; Elwood Ohlinger, 1978; George Troutman, 1979; Carl Miller, 1980; Clarence Sattazahn, 1981; Kenneth Grimes, 1982.

The Agricultural and Horticultural Association of Berks County, also honors an outstanding 4-H boy and girl for their contributions to society and achievements in agriculture and also honors a boy and girl in the Future Farmers of America program.

"She's an outstanding young lady and going to be a leader of tomorrow," announced Clyde Myers, Berks County Extension agent, when presenting the award for outstanding 4-H girl to Deborah Ann Price, R2, Douglassville. Debbie's award was accepted by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jere Price, since Debbie could not leave her studies at Penn State, where she is a freshman pre-vet and dairy science major.

Debbie has been a 4-H'er for 10 years and has had projects in Dairy goats, dairy cattle, vet science, leadership, and citizenship. She has been instrumental in beginning the Kids with Kids Dairy Goat Club, and is also a member of the Eastern Berks 4-H Dairy Club. A County Council representative, Debbie has won laurels as: Keystone Award Winner in public speaking, vet science, and Outstanding 4-H'er, Kwianis Club Outstanding 4-H'er, I Dare You Leadership Award, Eastern National Junior Dairyman of 1982, and as the Grand Champion Fitter and Showman at fairs and round-ups in the diary goat competitions.

She graduated from the Daniel Boone Area High School as Valedictorian in her class, is the alternate Berks County Dairy Princess for 1982 and 1983, and also volunteers at the Daniel Boone Homestead.

The outstanding farm family for 1983 is the Leroy Howard Family of Oley and includes: left to right: Glenn and wife, Brandon, Sharon, Casey, Cindy, Karen, Naomi, and Leroy.

"She's one of our outstanding 4-H'ers, Myers concluded. In a letter from Debbie, read by her father, Jere, she stated, "awards like this give the initiative to make the best, better."

Receiving the award for the Outstanding 4-H Boy was Kevin Shollenberger, son of Roy and Anna Shollenberger, R1, Hamburg. Kevin has been a 4-H'er for nine years and is currently the President of the Tilden 4-H Community Club and Treasurer of County Council. A member of National Honor Society, Kevin was the County Blueform winner in Leadership in 1982 and is active in Boy Scouts.

The award for the Outstanding FFA girl went to Pam Trostle, daughter of Ronald and Gale Trostle, R1, Mohnton. A member of the Twin Valley Chapter, Pam, "has been the type of student and FFA member that every advisor wishes he had more of," stated Ron Frederick, teacher at the Twin Valley School, as he presented her with the award. Active as the Chapter reporter, Pam received a trophy twice for submitting the most news articles to the state magazine. She was the Star Greenhand and received the Keystone Degree this past January.

Currently the Junior Advisor of the Twin Valley FFA Chapter, William Kirk was chosen as the Outstanding FFA Boy. The son of Robert and Betty Kirk, R4, Honey Brook, William currently works on his parents' farm and in their meat cutting business.

Agricultural Director of the Reading Fair, Wayne Readinger, was the Master of Ceremonies of this event and all awards were presented by the President of the Association, Albert Boscov, who Readinger described as "the very heart of this whole operation."

Boscov presented several other awards this evening to people serving the fair faithfully year after year. Horace Miller, a member of the Fair Board for 47 years, who is resigning this year was honored for his service.

"No one has ever served the Reading Fair as long or as well as Horace," Boscov stated.

A past vocational ag teacher, Miller stated, "I've taught some very successful farmers," and also said that he is glad to see the many youth programs continuing.

Dave Souders, 1st Vice President of the Association announced the parade plans for the opening of the Reading Fair on September 19th at 6 p.m.

Guest speaker for the evening was Clifford L. Jones, a member of the Public Utilities Commission and an active force in state service since 1953. A driving force behind the hazardous waste act, Jones has served on DER, Pennsylvanians for Effective Government, Secretary of the Pa. Department of Labor and Industry, Deputy Secretary of Commerce, and also as Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority.

This ambassador from the political and industrial side of the state's population, was able to tell the farmers just how important their products have become in the world.

"Food plays a big part in the diplomacy of the world today," Jones stated, adding he would like to see the Russians dependent on U.S. grains year after year since a country dependent on another will not declare war on it.

Albert Boscov presents the awards to William Kirk and Pam Trostle.

Livestock standards developed for tainted soil

PULLMAN, Wa. — Without puncturing the skin, U.S. Department of Agriculture animal scientist, George F. Fries, can predict the residue of polybrominated biphenyl (PBB) in farm animals exposed to contaminated soil. His findings enabled him to determine safe levels for PBB in soils where livestock are produced.

More importantly, his findings will help scientists develop standards for raising livestock on soils contaminated with other persistent chemicals — such as dioxin and DDT — which also accumulate in animals and thus enter the food chain.

Fries, who is with USDA's Agricultural Research Service (ARS), identified PBB as the feed contaminant which caused illness and death of Michigan dairy cattle during the mid-1970's. He has studied 25 of the afflicted farms intensively and reported some of the findings here today at the national meeting of the American Society of Animal Science. They are the first to link contaminated soil with animal tissue residues.

After cleaning up their buildings and equipment and replacing all animals with new stock, some Michigan farmers continued to have PBB residues above the tolerance level (the concentration of PBB allowed in meat by the Michigan legislature), Fries explained. He concluded that "the only significant source of PBB was soil the animals ingested while foraging in the confinement lots." These lots, which had little or no vegetation, were close to the milking parlor and thus prone to contamination by tainted feed and feces.

As a federal scientist charged with protecting farm animals from toxic and residual chemicals, Fries gathered extensive data from each farm to develop guidelines for producing livestock on contaminated soil. The study was in cooperation with scientists at Michigan State University.

Fries found he could statistically correlate the concentration of PBB in animal tissue with the concentration of PBB in soil and the length of exposure to that soil. The correlation, however, varied depending on whether the animals were ruminants (cattle or sheep) or nonruminants (swine), whether they were producing milk, and how long they had been producing milk.

Among ruminants, beef calves and yearling heifers showed the highest average tissue residue—39 and 37 percent of the soil concentration, respectively.

After the first calf, average tissue residue dropped somewhat to 27 percent because cows have a "route of excretion" through the milk, he explained. Older dairy cows showed a statistically significant reduction to 10 percent of the soil concentration. The longer a cow has been calving and producing milk, the lower its tissue residue, Fries explained.

Ewes had about the same average tissue residue (29 percent of the soil concentration) as cows with the first calf, indicating that "all ruminant classes in which milk is not an important excretion factor accumulate PBB at about the same rate," he said.

Livestock standards

percent) that of the soil concentration, or five times higher than yearling heifers.

Fries determined these average residues using results of biopsy samples from the livestock on 9 of the 25 farms. But, because they are averages, Fries cautioned, 50 percent of the animals could be presumed to have higher residues. He, therefore, calculated the level of soil contamination that would be acceptable to insure that 95 percent of the livestock would not exceed a tolerance level.

As a "reasonable rule of thumb," according to Fries, cattle and sheep that are not producing milk could safely be confined to areas in which the PBB concentration was no higher than the tolerance, while dairy cows could handle a somewhat higher level of contamination. Swine, however, should not be confined to areas where there is any detectable level of soil contamination. The standards will have to be applied with some judgment, says Fries, because individual farm operators manage their livestock differently.

"These data can be used as a model for other persistent compounds if allowances are made for differential rates of metabolism and bioconcentration." Fries said.

His studies could also affect the application of sewage sludge to pastures or conversion of cropland—such as an orchard with DDT residues—to pastureland.

While investigating the contaminated farms, Fries, together with ARS biologist G F Marrow and P.A. Snow of the University of Maryland Agronomy Department, measured the amount of soil ingested by dairy cattle and swine to provide a basis for the tissue-to-soil-residue correlations. The study included animals confined to buildings or paved lots, to bare or sparsely vegetated lots, and those allowed to graze freely on pastureland.

Results showed that swine consume two to three times more soil than dairy cattle which accounts for their higher residue levels. Pastured animals are apt to ingest as much if not more soil than those exposed to bare lots. Pastured animals that are not producing milk would most likely consume the most soil, Fries concluded, because they are least likely to be given supplemental feed. These studies were conducted on a number of the Michigan farms and in Maryland at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center where Fries is based.

Although no biopsy samples were taken from animals grazing on PBB-contaminated pasture, Fries indicated that tissue residues can be derived from his soil intake results. Separate studies by Fries and Michigan scientists had shown that the vegetation itself poses no danger. Forage and grain grown on soil contaminated with high levels of PBB (10 times the acceptable level) contained no trace of the toxic chemical

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

LEARNING FROM THE SWISS FARMERS

I'm proud of my Swiss ancestry. Not that there were any real history makers among them that I know of. They were just plain folks, Mennonite farmers who in the early 1700's were invited by William Penn to come to Pennsylvania and help to settle and populate the wilderness of Penn's Woods.

I often wondered what it must have been like to uproot your family from the homeland and move to a wild, and unsettled land across the sea. After visiting a land as beautiful as Switzerland, I am convinced that those emigrants didn't leave because of the mountains, or the land or the lovely forests. They were under persecution because of their Religious beliefs and only sought refuge in a foreign land so that they could be free to worship and to avoid military service. I'm sure that they were haunted by the memories of the beautiful land they would never see again.

Swiss farming is unique. There are fairly large valley farms, cultivated much the same way we do here. Small grains like wheat, barley and oats are common. They air for high yields by controlling diseases and weeds and fertilize heavily with manure and chemical fertilizers. But the striking difference between our farms and the Swiss becomes evident when we visit the Alpine regions of Switzerland.

Our rural tour of Switzerland included a visit to a summer mountain pasture farm, high in the Alps above the Simme valley. It is owned by the Buehler family, who also own land in the valley, where they breed Simmental cattle. The high Alpine pastures are grazed from May to October. The herd is moved on foot up to the highland pastures in spring, with all of the time honored tradition of cowbells, fancy costumes, flowers and yodling!

FEAST IN STABLE

We were welcomed with a demonstration of the beautiful tones of the Alphorn, played by a talented Swiss lass who also sang several traditional mountain songs accompanied by her husband who played the accordian and Yodled up a storm. All this while we enjoyed a Swiss mountain feast, served right in the cow stable!

Yes, the stable is the largest room in the building. It was quite handy to the kitchen, where the meal was prepared over an open fire. Crude tables and benches were covered with bright tablecloths, and we sat with out backs to the wooden mangers. The only decorations on the wall were some cowbells and the leather surcingles for milking. A single vacuum line for the milker was installed along one wall.

The building was made of hand hewn logs, built by Mr. Buehlers ancestors about 1780 and had never seen any paint or preservative. Apparently the cool mountain air preserves the wood, because it was as sound as the day it was built.

No one even noticed the neat manure pile just outside the stable door — at least not before we were done eating. It was a natural part of the scenery, acceptable to all of us whue we enjoyed the generous hospitality of the sincere Swiss mountain folk.

Top bidder Rhein's at State Jersey Sale

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — Dairymen from five states bid on the 31 head of registered Jerseys at the Pennsylvania State Jersey sale to bring the sale average up to $1,493.18, an increase of over $150 from the previous year. Although many dairymen across the state had been hesitant to consign their top animals to this sale because of failing prices, they went home pleased with the sale average on their above herd average consignments as the median of the sale was $1,500 and no cow or herd heifer dropped below the $1,000 mark.

Taking home the high selling animal of the day for the third consecutive year was Jersey breeder Craig Rhein, Pine Grove. Ogston Greats Dorine, a fresh two year old daughter of A-Nine Call Me Great, commanded the high bid of $3025 from Rhein as he held up to the pressure of the spirited bidding on this extremely sharp looking individual.

Consigned by Jack Bishop, Ogston Farm, Columbus, "Dorine" represents some of the top bloodlines of the breed. "Dorine's" dam is rated VG-82 and is milking over 12,000 pounds with a 4.6% test, her granddam boasts records over 15,900 pounds with a 4.5%.

The Rhein herd is currently averaging over 13,000 pounds milk and 600 pounds fat. Craig Rhein stated that he was buying today to replace some cows that were recently lost and to support the milk check after the 50 cents deductions. Rhein was the volume buyer of the day, taking home four head for a total of $8,325.00.

His purchase in 1982, also the high selling animal of that year and also consigned by Ogston Farm, proved her worth at the Rhein's Meadow View Farm with her first record of: 1-11 305 12,693 milk, 601 fat. She finished second in the 1983 Production Contest of the

(Turn to Page D21)

The second high selling animal went to Robert Caccese of Elmer, New Jersey for 2500.00. Consigned by Ivan Zimmerman on the left, "Babe" is surrounded by her new owner, Caccese, Don Koontz, who read pedigrees, and Patty Dreisbach, Jersey Queen.

The winner of the Production Award was Walebe Beacon Bonnie purchased by Dana and Debra Stoudt. Each year records must be submitted on the purchased animal and a winner is selected by computing all actual records on a 305 day 4% fat corrected basis. "Bonnie" milked in a mixed herd of Jerseys and Holsteins had an actual record of 4-11 305 days 16,527 milk, 724 fat with a 18,711 FCM to win the contest for the Stoudt's.

Jersey Sale

Winning first place in the production contest was Walebe Beacon Bonnie. "Bonnie", purchased by the Stoudt's for $2500.00 last year, was entered in the 1983 contest after finishing her 4 year, 11 month record with: 16,527 pounds milk actual and 724 pounds fat actual. This totaled 18,711 pounds of 4% fat corrected milk to win the Production award. "Bonnie" is fresh again and milking close to 70 pounds a day.

Third place in the Production Contest went to the 1982 purchase of Donald and Jill Stonerook, Martinsburg, Pa. Carrock Ultimate Dulcina, from the herd of William and Susan Dietrich, R1, Newburg, milked at 2 years, 1 month, 305 days, 12,617 pounds milk, 623 pounds fat. Testing 4.9% in the Stonerook herd, "Dulcina", brought them back to the sale for another purchase as they along with many other breeders sought to integrate Jerseys into their herds.

Second high selling cow, Cedar Lane Soldier Boy Babe, was consigned by Ivan Zimmerman, East Earl, Pa. "Babe", is currently finishing her 3 year old record with over 14,000 pounds of 5% milk. Boasting a cow index of +1233M, "Babe" is among the "Elite Cows" of the breed.

The sale committee revealed that it had been hard to persuade Zimmerman to consign this top individual since she was the best cow in his barn. "Babe" commanded the bid of $2500 from Robert Caccese, Elmer, who is currently assembling his Jersey herd to begin shipping milk this week. "Babe" is a daughter of Briarcliffs Soldier Boy and is due again in January.

The third highest bid in the sale was $1960 by Craig Rhein on two more top animals for his barn. Soldier Boy Champion Bobbie, consigned by Clyde and Robert Robison, Coal Center, attracted Rhein with her 3 year old record of 15,789 milk, 4.6% test and 729 pounds of fat. Also among the "Elite Cows" of the breed, "Bobbie" has a cow index of +1439M and is also a daughter of Briarcliffs Soldier Boy.

Also bringing $1900.00 on the bid of Rhein was Byrncoed Galahad Betty Lou, consigned by James Craig Williams, Middletown. A daughter of Briarcliffs Silver Galahad, "Betty Lou" sold fresh and open and boasted a dam with records over 16,000 pounds of milk.

Each year the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club also sponsors a "Pot of Gold Sale" for junior bidders between the ages of 8 and 19 years. Only open heifers are sold with the buyers to take the animal home, breed her, milk her, and submit her first record to the sale committee for the "Pot of Gold Contest". A portion of the gross of the sale is awarded to the junior with the heifer with the highest record computed on a 4% fat

(Turn to Page D22)

The high selling animal in the State Sale was the consignment of Ogston Farm, and purchased by Craig and Carmen Rhein, Pine Grove. Brian Harris is at the halter and the Jersey Queen, Patty stands with them.

Poultry disease meeting

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The general conference committee of the National Poultry Improvement Plan will meet here Sept. 13 and 14 in room 5699 of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's South Building.

The plan is a voluntary state-federal cooperative effort to improve poultry and poultry products by controlling certain egg-transmitted and hatchery-disseminated poultry diseases

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture C.W. McMillan is chairman of the committee, which reviews the operation of the plan's program and recommends needed changes. Members represent the industry and the scientific community from six geographic areas and one member serves at large. Officials of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service coordinate the plan.

McMillan said the committee will develop and review possible amendments to plan provisions, review resolutions, advise on policy for reporting diseases, respond to questions on proposed plan changes, consider ways of cooperating with the pet bird industry and recommend members for an industry steering committee.

The committee also may recommend proposals to the Biennial National Plan Conference, which will meet June 26-28, 1984, in St. Paul, Minn., to observe the 50th anniversary of the plan.

The Sept. 13-14 meetings are open to the public. Written comments may be submitted before or at the meeting to Ray D Schar, APHIS Veterinary Services, room 828, Federal Building, 6505 Belcrest Rd., Hyattsville, Md. 20782.

Clark's purchase, Mercury Aspen, consigned in 1980 by Vantage Jerseys of Fredonia, finished with an actual record of 2 years, 1 month, 305 days, 14,620 pounds milk, and 676 pounds fat for a 4% fat corrected total of 19,627 pounds of milk.

home-made cheese. Platters of different kinds of cheese were served with salty bacon and chipped beef, and crusty bread spread with rich golden butter. Two kinds of apple cider to wash it down. And finally a much too rich meringue tart filled with what tasted like pure cream topped off the meal.

The Simmental cattle are milked daily and the milk is processed into a special kind of mountain cheese. It is stored in a special cave until the proper age is achieved. The mountain family employed by Mr. Buehler is skilled in the dying art of making this particular brand of cheese. They apparently have no trouble selling all they produce.

The steep and lush mountain pastures furnish all the feed needed by the Simmentals during the summer. Excess grass is harvested as hay, and carried down to the barn in bundles on the farmers back. Mechanization is limited to small walk-behind tractors. Many of the pastures are too steep to use the special self-loading wagons that are commonly seen on the valley farms. You sometimes wonder how the cows navigate the steep hillsides without falling off! But the rugged, dual purpose Simmentals thrive very well in this environment.

Mark Buehler is the tenth generation breeding Simmental cattle on that farm. He is a member of the Swiss and American Simmental Associations. The family is recognized for their fine cattle, and operate an export business for heifers, bulls, frozen semen and frozen embryos. They take pride in the fact that the Simmental breed has its origins in their valley, and is well known as the mother stock of several other breeds of dual purpose cattle in Europe. They have been used in this country to improve the beef breeds, claiming more milk for growing the calf, larger finish weights, leaner beef, and calving ease.

If there is only one thing we learn from the Swiss farmers, it should be the extreme attention to detail. Every inch of the land is productive and well maintained. The steepest hillsides, even the high mountain pastures, are grazed or mowed for the forage. No weed is allowed to flourish. Plants are encouraged to grow in every likely place, on rocky crags, over walls and especially in the ever-present window boxes filled with Geraniums.
